BRITISH ARMY EVACUATES BENGASI

Italian-German Forces Capture Important Port On Libya Coast

British Statement Says Army of Nile Retreated only after Inflicting Casualties on Enemy

CAIRO, April 4 (Friday) (AP)—British general headquarters announced early today that the army of the Nile had withdrawn from Bengasi, important Libyan seaport, but had inflicted "considerable casualties on personnel and tanks" of Axis mechanized forces.

A headquarters communique said:

Strategic Retreat

"In the face of the determined advance by strong Italian-German forces, disposing numerous tanks, and in pursuance of the policy so successfully adopted at Sidi Barrani of waiting to choose our own battleground, our light covering detachments have been withdrawn to selected concentration areas.

"In the course of this withdrawal the town of Bengasi has been evacuated after all captured military stores and equipment had been destroyed.

"Bengasi is indefensible from a military point of view and it has not been used by us as a port.

"As in the autumn of 1940 the enemy is evidently seeking propaganda success at the expense of stretching still farther an already extended line of communications. In their withdrawal our troops have already inflicted on the enemy considerable casualties in personnel and in tanks."

British Optimistic

Even while this was announced, British officers at the middle east headquarters were openly optimistic about the prospects of an early finish to the East African campaign, in which the Red Sea port of Massawa remains as the only Ethiopian city still held by the Italians and the British are closing in on Addis Ababa, capital of Ethiopia, from several directions.

However, London dispatches said the abandonment of Bengasi jolted the British public and in London military circles there was unpleasant surprise at the evacuation, which followed so closely British reports minimizing progress of the German-Italian column.

Bad News For London

The loss of Bengasi made incongruous reading alongside the news reports of spectacular East African triumphs over Italy.

It was estimated by competent sources that Germany has three motorized divisions in Libya, withdrawn from the French-Spanish border early in February, moved to Sicily and transported across the Mediterranean in the liners Rex and Conte Di Savoia.

Yugoslavia Tries Blackout as Nazi Invasion Looms

Germans Expected To Attack Belgrade within a Few Days

By ROBERT ST. JOHN

BELGRADE, April 3 (AP)—This Yugoslav capital blacked out for the first time tonight in a brief emergency air raid coinciding with declarations of hurriedly departing German diplomats that air attacks on the country will begin within the next few days, barring the most unexpected developments.

One diplomat disclosed the last official act was to buy sandbags to protect German buildings from the Nazi bombs "which probably soon will be dropping."

As the expectation of almost inevitable war thus grew hourly stronger in this kingdom, the government radio announced that Belgrade would be declared an open city in the hope of preventing devastation by German troops and planes massed on the Rumanian border only fifty miles away.

The German diplomats, however, said they had received no official word of any such declaration. To be prepared for eventualities the government enforced a twenty-minute practice blackout.

Traffic Paralyzed

Master switches extinguished every electric light in this city of more than 250,000. Traffic was paralyzed. The radio warned all citizens to be ready to douse their lights and take shelter the moment a real alarm sounds.

All Expected To Live; Dr. Crile And Wife among 13 Passengers

Pilot and Steward Most Seriously Hurt; Plane Lands in Three and a Half Feet of Water

MIAMI, Fla., April 3 (AP)—A Miami Herald reporter at Vero Beach informed the newspaper tonight that all sixteen occupants of the eastern airliner forced down in a swamp were injured, but none seriously.

His information was that the pilot and steward were most seriously hurt.

The pilot, Gerald O'Brien, had a crushed chest.

Dr. and Mrs. George W. Crile were first to be brought to the highway. The eminent Cleveland physician had a broken rib, his wife suffered from shock.

Mrs. Crile said the plane was brought down in about three and one-half feet of water.

Water Up to Waists

Water was up to the waists of the passengers as they sat in the craft, and both motors were torn from the plane, the reporter said.

"It was so black outside when the plane landed," Mrs. Crile said, "that we did not know we had hit the ground until we were jarred from our seats."

"Everyone was very sane. There was no crying."

"The plane was magnificent."

O'Brien Proves Hero

O'Brien was hurt as the result of being thrown against the steering apparatus as he strained to land the craft right side up.

Some of the passengers were brought in flat-bottomed boats to a highway about six miles from the scene of the crash.

They were rushed to a Vero Beach hospital.

George Shaw, a passenger, was reported to have a broken leg. He was forced to sit with the injured limb under water.

Count Pal Teleki Believed To Have Committed Suicide

'Great Tightrope Walker' in Diplomacy Found Dead in Bed

BUDAPEST, HUNGARY, April 3 (AP)—Count Pal Teleki, the premier who aligned Hungary with the Axis but fought to keep her from falling completely under German domination, was found dead in bed today, and authorities said he had had a bullet through his own brain.

Most Hungarians agreed that the man they knew as the great tightrope walker took his life because he could not continue his precarious balancing act.

Death came as motorized German troops moved to southern Hungary, amid reports that the Nazis were demanding Hungarian army help to attack Yugoslavia, with which Teleki had made a friendship pact.

He left farewell notes to his invalid wife and to the Hungarian regent, Admiral Nicholas Horthy. Discouraged About Future

There were reports that in the latter he detailed his feeling that Hungary no longer could hold out against German domination and that his two-year efforts had failed.

He is reported to have told the cabinet last night: "The future is hopeless."

The foreign office at first said the sixty-two-year-old statesman died of a heart attack, but friends said he had taken poison, and subsequent reports said he shot himself in the head.

BRICKBATS KEEP MEDICAL STATIONS BUSY

The clubs, bricks and other strike weapons hurled by opposing factions at the strike-terrorized Ford motor plant at Dearborn, Mich., resulted in many head and body injuries as evidenced by these strikers receiving first-aid at a C.I.O. emergency medical station located near the scene of battle. Much of the strike's earlier rioting subsided when Ford officials agreed to close the plant during settlement negotiations.

Martin Calls on Americans To Aid U. S. in Defense

GOP Chairman Also Says Party Must Police the New Deal

WASHINGTON, April 3 (AP)—Rep. Joseph W. Martin, Jr., Republican national chairman, called on Americans tonight to unite in making the nation invulnerable against assault from within or without and declared his own party must police and audit the Roosevelt administration in the present emergency.

In an address prepared for broadcast over CBS, the Massachusetts representative declared that in the midst of a great national crisis there was a vital need for "a vigorous, virile Republican party."

It must, he said, "police and audit the New Deal administration to protect our country from financial, political and social bankruptcy."

The two great dangers confronting the nation, Martin said, were that "some groups may seek to make use of our present emergency and the great burden of debt we are piling up to destroy our economic and political system" and that "the Republican party, suddenly returned to power through reaction against the New Deal, might lack a carefully-prepared program of action."

States First Danger

"As to the first danger," he said, "a New Dealer recently said, in private, the public debt probably could be increased to as much as 140 billions of dollars, at which point the public credit probably would break and the government would then step in and nationalize everything."

"As to the second danger, any party called upon in 1944 to meet the crisis would be a party of reaction."

Italy's "Sorrow" in Ethiopia and Eritrea Is Explained to the Public

ROME, April 3 (AP)—Italy's "sorrow at Eritrea and Ethiopia"—apparently a substantial admission of the imminent fall of all East Africa—was publicly acknowledged today in preparing the people for news of further "painful losses" to the British imperial armies.

Writing in Premier Mussolini's own newspaper, Il Popolo D'Italia of Milan, the Fascist military commentator Mario Appellus reported that 300,000 British soldiers "flanked by Haile Selassie's savage hordes and aided by formidable armament

Germany Says Yugoslavia Must Repudiate Britain And the United States

American Influence Said To Be Particularly Objectionable to the Nazis; Reich Worried

BERLIN, April 3 (AP)—Complete repudiation by Yugoslavia of English and American influence in her internal and foreign affairs appeared tonight to be the German condition for restoring relations with that kingdom.

It was emphasized that no official or authorized source was announcing any German terms but it was observed that nothing was changed in Germany's long-standing determination to eliminate England as a political influence in the Balkans.

American influence whatever it might be, was fast becoming as offensive to Berlin as English attempts to shape Balkan policies.

It was also stated by careful observers that demobilization of the Yugoslav army at least to peace time basis, could be a logical demand by some elements in Germany.

No one in a responsible position would say the door has been completely closed to negotiations not precisely what Germany would consider adequate adjustment.

Reich Seems Worried

But it was obvious that the Reich was concerned by reports of intensive military preparations in Yugoslavia.

German press dispatches said the Serb mobilization was in full swing. Germany also was seriously and publicly taking account of the intensification of the struggle between northern and southern fields and was indicated as the principal obstacle to an agreement with the union.

While the bituminous coal miners and operators continued their discussions, the tri-district convention of the U.M.W. hard coal miners scale committee recommended a $1-a-day wage increase for workers paid by the day or month and a twenty percent increase for those working on a tonnage basis.

This proposal, among others, will be submitted to a conference with anthracite operators next week at which a new contract will be negotiated to replace the one which expires April 30.

Anthracite Demands

The anthracite miners scale committee also recommended that the union seek two-weeks' annual vacation with pay, time and a half for

Federal Judge Acts in "Great Emergency" When Company Goes into Court

Restraining Order Will Be Operative for Five Days; Company Also Asks $1,000,000 Damages in Action against Unions; Surprise Move Charges Intimidation of Company Employees

DETROIT, April 3 (AP)—Federal Judge Arthur J. Tuttle, acting on a plea from the Ford Motor Company, issued a temporary injunction tonight restraining the CIO's United Automobile Workers from interfering with Ford workers. The court said there was "a great emergency."

The injunction, signed by Judge Tuttle at 8:07 p. m. (EST), climaxed a day of further scattered violence in the two-day-old UAW (CIO) strike which has halted production at the huge River Rouge workings, world's largest industrial plant.

CHARGES INTIMIDATION

In its complaint the Ford company also had asked an injunction against the Communist party, but this was denied by Judge Tuttle. The company, through Attorney I. A. Capizzi, had charged that "the United Automobile Workers (CIO) and the Communist party" were "threatening and intimidating employees."

Judge Tuttle granted the injunction, which also is specifically directed against the CIO itself, over the protests of affiliated auto workers union. The union claimed that the company's allegations were incorrect since "at this time" there was "no interference with anyone."

"I think this is a great emergency," Judge Tuttle said. "When thousands of people gather and blockade roads, it is time we showed it to be an emergency, and everyone, plaintiff, defendants and everyone else, should do everything they can to end it."

Company Move a Surprise

The company obtained the injunction in a surprise move at the very time that negotiations were being continued by a federal mediator in hurried efforts to secure a settlement and return 85,000 men to work.

The order, effective for five days, declares that the Ford company is suffering loss of large sums of money, in excess of $1,000,000. Capizzi had asked that damages be set.

In findings of fact, Judge Tuttle said in part:

"In short, the showing before me x x x is such that I find for the purpose of this temporary injunction that nothing short of armed force of the militia is able to meet and control the situation as it existed yesterday and as it has partially continued today, and as I fear may occur and continue into the future."

The injunction forbids the CIO and its UAW affiliate from:

Terms of Injunction

1.—"Interfering by threats, intimidations or otherwise," with any employees of the company.

2.—"Molesting or disturbing employees" "in the quiet and peaceful pursuit of their lawful avocations."

3.—"Preventing ingress, egress and regress of employees to the plant.

4.—"Molesting or disturbing any person or persons having 'business' with the company or its officers, directors, agents or employees."

5.—"Maintaining barricades across the highways and across the entrances of said plants."

6.—"Intimidating, coercing, or humiliating" any officers, etc., "or assaulting or offering to do violence" to any officers, etc., "or offering to do violence" to any officers, etc."

Judge Tuttle issued the injunction following a discussion with Jack Tucker, UAW-CIO attorney, over present conditions in the plant vicinity.

Pleading that Judge Tuttle withhold his verdict until union witnesses could be heard, Tucker said there was no emergency and that circumstances had changed greatly since the widespread fighting of Wednesday.

Even then, however, Tucker said, he would have opposed an injunction because the trouble at the River Rouge plant was "the company's fault."

The injunction suit was on ex parte showing, in which only one side is heard and the court sets a date for hearing testimony from the other side.

Stimson Hints U. S. May Operate Milwaukee Plant

Secretary Declares War Department Is "Equipped" To Run Allis-Chalmers Plant if Necessary

WASHINGTON, April 3 (AP)—The possibility of federal seizure and operation of the long strike-bound Allis-Chalmers plant in Milwaukee was raised today by a remark from Secretary Stimson that the war department was "equipped" to operate such an establishment.

Meanwhile, the defense mediation board called representatives of management and labor to Washington for negotiations looking to a settlement of the case. At the same time Rep. McCormack, the Democratic floor leader, predicted early action by President Roosevelt to relieve the general strike situation, and the chief executive's attitude was described by a White House secretary as one of "watching and waiting." Without threatening to take over the Allis-Chalmers plant, Stimson told reporters in response to questions that he believed the war department could operate it if need be.

Patience Not Weakness

"The patience of Uncle Sam is very long, and rightly so, for the power of Uncle Sam is so great it ought to be used very carefully," he said. "But nobody makes a greater mistake than to construe Uncle Sam's patience for weakness."

As for operating the plant, he said he had an "idea we could find (Continued on Page 2, Col. 3)

U. S. Demands Recall of Naval Attache by Italy

Step Just Short of Break in Relations Taken as Result of Sabotaging of Many Ships

By J. C. STARK

WASHINGTON, April 3 (AP)—In a step just short of a break in relations, the United States today linked Italy's high ranking naval attache here with widespread sabotage of Italian merchant ships and bluntly told his government to call him home immediately.

The move, ordered by President Roosevelt, was the first of its kind since World war days when German and Austro-Hungarian diplomatic and military officials were forced out of the country on charges of fomenting strikes and other anti-American activities.

A strong note dispatched to the Italian ambassador, Prince Colonna, declared the naval attache, Ad-

Rep. Engel Would 'Kick Out' High Meade Officers

Congressman Charges "Wilful" and "Outrageous" Waste at Camp

WASHINGTON, April 3 (P)—A charge of "wilful" and "outrageous" waste at Camp Meade, Md., was coupled by Representative Engel (R-Mich.) today with a demand that those responsible be "kicked out" of their jobs.

Engel told the House that army authorities had paid a Baltimore engineering firm $40,120 for surveys, and then ignored the firm's advice as to location of buildings at the camp.

The result was increased construction costs, he asserted, because the engineering company had recommended utilization of roads and utilities left over from a 1917-18 camp there. The new camp is being built, Engel said, across the government reservation from the old camp.

Costs Up Sharply

He said this was the reason, in part, for the estimate of cost being increased from $9,033,187 to $23,117,000.

Asked on the floor who was responsible, Engel replied that he was "informed" that the "corps area commander" had overruled the engineering firm's recommendations.

The Michigan representative also criticized Secretary of Labor Perkins for fixing higher wage rates for Fort Belvoir, Va., than for Camp Meade. Both are near Washington.

Complain From Contractor

"The contractor claims," said Engel, "that he was compelled to add enough overtime to the workers payroll to make up the pay they would have received at Belvoir or adjoining areas and that much of $1,808,320 overtime was paid because of this wage difference."

The camp, he asserted, was operated as a "closed shop" and unions there charged initiation fees ranging from $25 to $57.50.

"The contractor informed me," Engel said, "that while he had to hire through the union he could fire anyone he wanted to fire for any cause without interference by the union. It was naively suggested that the more men he fired the more fees the union could collect."

Martin Calls on

the grave problems which the New Deal administration has for more than eight years left unsolved will have an extremely difficult task. We Republicans are busy studying these problems now. We will be well prepared for the task that lies ahead."

Asserting that he was speaking in the interests of a strong Republican party but not in a partisan spirit, Martin described the present emergency in these terms:

Enormous Taxes Ahead

"Vast and unprecedented powers have been given to the chief executive. Bewildering sums are being spent for defense—and in the name of defense. Enormous taxes are soon to be imposed upon our people. We stagger along in the direction of war. We face the possibility of national bankruptcy."

He said the Republican party must police the powers granted to the president "to assure, as far as possible, their wise administration" and must be ready "to fight to restore those powers to the people's representatives when the emergency has ended."

In the National Defense program, he said, "profiteering, contract racketeering, or partisan spending will not be tolerated by a people who see their very future menaced."

No Time for Strikes

"This is no time," he continued, "for strikes or lockouts which prevent us from achieving the earliest possible adequate national defense. No honest American workman wants to defeat the security of his country. x x x Under honest, patriotic leadership, American workers will respond to the call of their country as readily as those men who serve under arms. x x x"

"We Republicans have a vastly important function in this national emergency. The safety and perpetuity of our nation are at stake. We must guard them against mistakes and against excesses of power or excesses of spending."

Italy's "Sorrow"

How to Italy through our sorrow at Eritrea and Ethiopia."

The Italian high command earlier had acknowledged the abandonment to the British of Asmara, the capital of Eritrea, saying that such action had been taken to save the city from further bombardment—which already has taken "hundreds of victims."

Battle Resumed

The East African battle, it was then stated without amplification, had "started up again in new positions."

On the offensive side, the high command announced that German and Italian planes had sunk six British steamers in two convoys in the eastern Mediterranean, and probably a seventh.

As to the Yugoslavian situation, the Fascist editorialist, Virginio Gayda, wrote that Yugoslavia's virtual repudiation of Axis membership had freed Germany and Italy of the obligation assumed in that pact to respect that country's independence and territorial integrity.

ALLIS-CHALMERS STRIKERS STONE POLICE FORTRESS

Strikers (left) of the Allis-Chalmers plant in Milwaukee heave rocks at the mobile fortress, used by the sheriff's department in combating strike disturbances at the huge factory, at one stage, the fortress' gas shell throwing device jammed, and it was withdrawn from the battle temporarily. Thirty-one men were injured in the two-and-a-half hour battle, hundreds of windows of the company's main office and laboratory were broken and automobiles, including that of Governor Julius P. Heil, were smashed and damaged.

Permanent Wave Fatal to Woman

Heatless Treatment Said To Contain Dangerous Poison

WASHINGTON, April 3 (P)—Federal agents moved swiftly today to clear beauty salons in an undetermined number of cities of a heatless permanent waving preparation declared by the federal food and drug administration to contain a "dangerous poison."

The administration analyzed the preparation on receiving word that a socially prominent Georgia matron died a few minutes after a visit to a hair-waving shop.

Dr. P. B. Dunbar, assistant commissioner of food and drugs, said the preparation was applied to the skin of a rabbit in the administration laboratory, and the animal died within an hour. Dunbar said the preparation was known as the "Willat Method of Heatless Permanent Waving" and that his agency had put that name into a federal court record today in moving to seize the product.

The first seizures were made in Washington and Dr. Dunbar said stocks in Atlanta would be confiscated, probably tomorrow. He expressed the opinion the goods had wide distribution.

The authority described the poison in the preparation as Ammonium Hyrogen Sulfide.

Mrs. Agnes Scott Searcy died in Atlanta March 19 shortly after visiting a beauty shop. The medical certificate attributed death primarily to "acute hydrogen sulfide poisoning."

overtime, double time for Sundays and holidays.

The existing anthracite contract provides for a minimum of $4.62 a day for outside workers, $5.96 for company miners, and varying tonnage rates.

The anthracite miners kept a watchful eye on the bituminous negotiations since the soft coal miners sought a blanket $1-a-day wage increase for a flat $7-a-day-wage instead of the existing $6 in the north and $5.60 in the south, a guaranteed 200 working days a year and two-weeks vacation with pay annually.

Rescue workers said it would take hours more to remove all those on the plane.

Mrs. Crile related this account of the crash:

Mrs. Crile's Story

"I don't think anyone is critically hurt. The pilot is apparently the worst injured. He suffered a broken leg and other injuries. He lapsed into unconsciousness several minutes prior to the rescue. The steward is badly cut but not seriously."

Shortly after leaving Palm Beach, we ran into the most terrible storm I have ever seen and I have flown tens of thousands of miles. The plane was tossed around and we didn't know where we were for awhile. The blankets and cushions flew about the cabin and the tossing was so severe we didn't even know when we were going down.

"The plane hit with a terrific crash in the mud and water. Everyone maintained his composure and there was no panic. The conduct of the crew was superb. The water poured in the open windows and we have been sitting in it up to our hips all day long."

"Immediately after the crash several of the men got outside in the mud but the women stayed in the plane."

al from Bengasi, the British said imperial forces had given up the town of Agedabia, some eighty miles south of Bengasi, and between seventy-five and eighty miles of worthless desert.

Bengasi, capital of the province of the same name, is a railroad and communication center, and one of the best African harbors on the Mediterranean. The Italians considered it part of their national territory.

In Berlin a military commentator declared the Axis thrust was "the first time German land troops have had a real tussle with the British army since the days of Dunkerque." However, the Berlin announcement said only that the Axis force was about twenty miles north of Agedabia or some sixty miles from Bengasi.

Nazis Claim Superiority

"It was definitely established that the German troops now are just as superior to the British as in the battles of Belgium," the Berlin spokesman said. "Also noteworthy is the fact that it was the first real test of German motorized units under semi-tropical conditions in a desert region."

Berlin sources said the British retired so quickly that they were obliged to burn large gasoline stores.

Bengasi was captured by the British on Feb. 7 after a sixty-one day drive from Egypt which carried the British forces east of Agheila, 180 miles down the coast from Bengasi, before it slackened.

Mexico To Keep 12 Axis Vessels

MEXICO CITY, April 3 (P)—A responsible foreign office source said tonight Mexico has practically decided to expropriate twelve German and Italian ships now under Mexican custody in Tampico and Vera Cruz harbors.

In return, this source asserted, Mexico would cancel German and Italian indebtedness to Mexico for pre-war petroleum shipments. This debt has been unofficially estimated around $12,000,000.

German Bombers Return to London

LONDON, April 4 (Friday)—(P)—German bombers sharply attacked a west country sector for several hours last night and early today and subjected London to two night alarms without bombing the capital.

Heavy anti-aircraft fire beat off the western attack, witnesses said.

Other raiders fanned out over several other parts of England and Wales.

The Germans returned to London around midnight after getting a hot reception by anti-aircraft guns on their earlier brief sortie.

Over an hour later the all clear was sounded in the London area. No bombs were reported dropped but much gunfire was heard.

London's first alert lasted only about thirty minutes.

There was sharp action in one south coast area, however, with anti-aircraft guns putting up a big barrage as raiders flew inland.

29th Division Army Day Saturday

FORT GEORGE G. MEADE, Md., April 3 (P)—The Twenty-Ninth division will observe army day Saturday by massing as a combined unit for the first time since its mobilization in February.

About 10,000 officers and men will pass in review before Major General Milton A. Reckord, division commander, and his staff. There will also be an audience of some 1,200 selectees from the recruit receiving center who have just arrived at Fort Meade.

All units will parade on foot, with light weapons and combat packs.

There will be little fanfare or ceremony, and no formal inspection. Earlier plans for such an inspection were abandoned in order not to interfere with week-end leave.

However, all officers and enlisted men have been ordered to participate except students at school, those on the sick list and authorized administrative details.

Epidemic of Measles Continues Unabated

BALTIMORE, April 3 (P)—Maryland's epidemic of measles continued unabated today, although a shift in areas where the disease was most prevalent was noted by the state department of health.

On the basis of reports for the first three days in April, said Dr. C. H. Halliday, assistant director of the department, Caroline county now holds the dubious honor of reporting the greatest number of cases.

Wicomico county was the county reporting the most cases in each of the first three months of the year, but in the first three days of April, only eighteen cases were reported, as compared with 399 in March.

"On the allegations of the bill, but recognizing that the defendants should, of course, have a right to be heard, and this being an ex-parte hearing and not as full as it will ultimately be, but relying on the allegations of the bill, I make the further finding that the Ford Motor Company has not failed to comply with any obligation imposed by law which is involved in this particular labor dispute in question. x x x"

Judge Tuttle invited Attorney Tucker to make a motion for the hearing of testimony from union witnesses. Tucker, however, did not make a motion, although he indicated he might do so tomorrow.

Company Blames Communists
The suit followed upon another public statement by the company today charging that Communists were influential in the strike. The company has said repeatedly that Communists dominate the UAW-CIO.

When Judge Tuttle asked Capizzi why names of persons were not listed in the suit along with the UAW-CIO and the Communist party, the Ford attorney said that the names were too numerous but added:

"If your honor sees fit to issue the injunction, we will see that the proper parties are served."

Hard upon further violence at the Rouge plant and warnings of possibly more bloodshed, Harry H. Bennett, company personnel chief, said today that Ford competitors "would like to have us give this plant to the government."

"Our competitors" and "the communists," he said, desire that.

"But that's not in the books," he added.

Governor Optimistic

The Bennett statement came upon an announcement by Governor Murray D. Van Wagoner that he had assurances of cooperation from both company and union representatives in his effort to start mediation of the strike that has made more than 85,000 hourly workers here idle and threatens to close some sixteen branch assemblies throughout the country before the week-end.

Simultaneously with these developments, Rolin McGroarty, shop organizer for the American Federation of Labor union in the Ford plant, said his union was asking Governor Van Wagoner to send 5,000 troops to the Rouge factory "to prevent bloodshed between strikers."

Germany Says

creasing force of British troops in Greece and their occupation of positions up against the Yugoslav border.

Contemplation of these troops in a Balkan position which the Axis has proclaimed its own exclusive sphere of influence recalled the oft-repeated German comment that the enemy would be struck wherever he appears.

Germans Hold Bulgaria

Possibly significant was the announcement in the press that German occupation of Bulgaria had been completed and that German troops in that region are exactly where the high command wanted them.

The German press began tonight to accuse Yugoslavia of aggressive designs on Austria.

Observers remarked on the similarity of the situation to the dark days of the Polish crisis of summer, 1939. Then, Germany was astrident with stories that certain Polish generals were talking about Polish occupation of east Prussia.

Today German refugees, coming from Yugoslavia by train, boat and motor car, were quoted as saying that the Serbs were widely acclaiming a remark attributed to the Serbian general Modic: "I and my north army will be in Vienna in two days."

Relations between Berlin and Belgrade continued tense and, in many respects, unclear.

Only Guarded Comment
Authorized comment remained guarded. However, it became more obvious that Germany is especially irritated by what Germans call Yugoslav tolerance of foreign influence in her national politics.

This, it is considered here, is entirely incompatible with Yugoslav adherence to the tripartite pact—to which, in German eyes, the Yugoslav government is being held.

Unaccountable, Yugoslav-German relations seem to be deteriorating more rapidly than Yugoslav relations with Italy. For one thing, it is understood here that German nationals and diplomatic representatives are departing for home with a greater urgency than appears to be impelling the Italians.

Mediation Considered
There is no comment here on certain rumors that a chance exists for some effort toward mediation between Yugoslavia and Italy.

Elsewhere in the German diplomatic and military fields:

Official silence continued respecting an unexpected German public declaration—seizure of Axis ships in the Western Hemisphere, but there were indications of plenty of activity beneath the surface. Spokesmen reiterated that the declaration will come and in an orderly manner, "the United States being the first act in the drama."

Then, one after another, the Germans will handle the situations created by ship seizures in Latin American countries, it was stated.

ers and men who wish to return to work."

Fears Much Bloodshed
McGroarty said he was convinced a back-to-work movement would start "if the men who want to go back get a leader." There will be a "lot of bloodshed," he went on, if such a movement starts.

McGroarty estimated there were 10,000 to 15,000 Ford workers in his union. The UAW-CIO, which called the strike Tuesday midnight, has never disclosed its membership strength in the Ford plants.

In scattered clashes at the plant today, pickets chased four negroes a mile from the main gate and thrashed them. Three pickets were bowled over by a car which followed the negroes' machine and crashed through the knot by struggling men at a speed estimated by witnesses at forty miles an hour.

One picket said he was stabbed in the abdomen during the affray.

The situation remained tense tonight after Bennett declared "we are not going to put these eight men back to work if they negotiate until Christmas. The Ford company will obey the law all the way through, which is more than the union can say."

"Dry Sundays" Now Up to O'Connor

OCEAN CITY, Md., April 3 (P)—It is up to Governor O'Connor to decide whether Worcester county shall have "dry Sundays," and the "petition fever" has now seized opponents of the move.

A bill prohibiting sale of beer or liquor in the county on Sundays cleared through the legislature going to Governor O'Connor's desk for legislative representatives to pass the measure.

Now the opponents, fearful that "Sunday prohibition" will cut the week-end crowds at Maryland's leading seashore resort, are planning petitions urging O'Connor to veto it.

The Worcester Sunday-ban bill was sponsored by Delegates Calvin P. Pruitt, Ralph E. Shookley, and Clarence E. Robertson.

AIDS ENVOY-HUSBAND

White-haired Peter Bojovic, who led the Serbian army that defeated Bulgaria in the second Balkan war in 1913, was named inspector-general (commander-in-chief) of the Yugoslav army, a title previously held by the exiled Regent Prince Paul.

Diplomatic reports from German occupied countries told of massings of Nazi troops which indicated the German general staff is planning four definite thrusts if war comes:

1. A sweep down from Hungary and old Austria through the comparative flat Banat district of northeast Yugoslavia toward Belgrade with fast motorized equipment.
2. A drive west from Rumania through the frontier town of Vrsac in an attempt to take Belgrade within two days.
3. A heavy force sent northwest from Bulgaria to attempt the capture of the vital rail junction at Nis.
4. The main attack, from southern Bulgaria through the mountain passes westward to try to seize Skopje and get to the Albanian frontier to keep the Yugoslavs from driving the Italians into the Adriatic in an Axis Dunkerque.

Amid all these preparations and reports, the symbols of internal peace and external dangers were evident in two trains moving across Yugoslavia tonight.

In one, bound south from Zagreb to Belgrade, was Macek, the vice-premier, coming to take his place in the government;

$1,340,622,707 Is Voted Farmers in Spite of Protest

Senate Passes Bill without Record Vote; Now Returns to House

WASHINGTON, April 3 (P)—Beating down all attempts to cut the total, the Senate today approved a record-breaking annual farm bill carrying $1,340,622,707 cash.

The measure, which went through without a record vote, now goes back to the House for consideration of nearly $450,000,000 added in the Senate.

Senator Taft (R-Ohio) led a futile attempt to reduce a $450,000,000 "parity payment" item. Protesting against "raids on the treasury" and increases in non-defense costs, Taft asked that this fund be held to the $212,000,000 voted by the House and recommended in President Roosevelt's budget.

The economy effort was smothered under a 61 to 9 vote as Senator Russell (D-Ga.), floor manager for the bill, asserted the benefit payments would merely permit "farmers to exist" while labor and industry reaped huge profits from the defense program.

A second test on an increase of $35,000,000 in funds to finance the stamp plan for distributing food to needy persons failed to produce a single opposition vote. The roll call showed 56 senators answering "aye." From then on items ranging from a few thousand dollars to millions were approved "without objection." Under the Senate version, nearly a billion dollars would be paid out of the treasury in the form of benefit payments to farmers cooperating in administration farm programs.

holders to make shelters of their cellars quickly and issued other invasion instructions.

Communities in the vital Vardar River valley, which a German southward thrust towards Greece would follow, began all-night black-outs.

The army began requisitioning big resort hotels in the mountains for use as hospitals.

The German diplomatic corps, except for two attaches, quit the country on personal orders from Joachim von Ribbentrop, the Nazi foreign minister. Italian diplomats were preparing to leave.

Predict Early Fighting
The German radio hurled new charges of terrorism against Yugoslavia, and this country in turn dropped its polite tones to slap back boldly at the Nazi campaign of invective. Some Germans here professed the belief that armed conflict might be only a few hours distant.

In this atmosphere, white-haired Vladimir Macek, the leader of the powerful Croat minority, accepted the Yugoslav vice-preiership in the cabinet of Gen. Dusan Simovic to establish national unity.

Macek expressed confidence that peace was still possible with Croats and Serbs thus united to face the common peril. Most persons, however, said war with Germany was inevitable and imminent.

There were reports from Bucharest that German Field Marshal Walther von Brauchitsch had passed through there en route to Bulgaria to take command of the German Balkan campaign.

White-haired Peter Bojovic, who led the Serbian army that defeated Bulgaria in the second Balkan war in 1913, was named inspector-general (commander-in-chief) of the Yugoslav army, a title previously held by the exiled Regent Prince Paul.

A Change in the War Picture With a Lesson for America

SOMETHING other than bombings, sinkings and other destruction is being discerned in the news lately coming from the war zones. A deep and significant undercurrent, new, unusual and strange, yet a fact, appears to have altered the whole picture completely.

The New York Herald Tribune senses the change. "On the same day in every quarter of the earth," it says, "the vast and supposedly invincible power of the Nazi-Fascist Axis is all at once in indecision, on the defensive or on the run."

From Tokyo, where there are sudden doubts about Mr. Matsuoka's pilgrimage, right around the world to Puerto Cabello, where an exuberant citizenry relieved its feelings by burning down a German-owned hotel, the Nazi-Fascists are faltering, failing, evacuating, surrendering, protesting to ears at last steered against them by their own brutal arrogance. Asmara falls, the oldest capital of the Italian empire; Germans and Italians are in headlong flight from Yugoslavia; Axis shipping is being seized or scuttled all over the Americas; the British bombers are trading two to one across the Channel and the North Sea; Moscow is a shade chillier than before. For one moment, the story is everywhere the same, and it induces a curious feeling.

"No doubt tomorrow the scene will change. New hammer blows will fall, and men whose only statesmanship is the brute stupidity of violence will show that their power for violence is not yet exhausted. But nothing will be quite the same as it was before. For the something that has run all around the globe is the first premonitory shiver of a mighty earthquake—an announcement and a warning of the terrific forces of revolution generated in millions of minds in every country by the dominance of Hitler's apellike state. The release of those cataclysmic forces has begun. The earth has trembled once beneath the feet of that allegedly irresistible colossus; it will move again, and with sudden and certain effect shatter its meretricious might into fragments and nothingness."

This remarkable though gratifying change in the war picture furnishes a lesson for America. It is that the aid for the victims of Nazi aggression to which it has been committed should be speedily sent to the end that it may the sooner serve to turn the scales of the balance in favor of freedom and against brute slavery. It gives notice of a great opportunity for bringing an end to the awful destruction abroad. It suggests as plainly as anything can suggest that we here in America should no longer tolerate the hindrances to this effort, which the people are suspecting are the result of Fifth Column subversiveness. Time is, indeed, of the essence, and never before has it been so important.

A Product of Hysteria, But a Danger Signal

A WASHINGTON DISPATCH has carried the information that Representative Ford, of California, has introduced a bill in the House of Representatives designed to stop strikes in defense industries.

Just which Representative Ford from California this is, the dispatch does not indicate. There are two Representative Fords from the Los Angeles region, one a Republican, the other a Democrat.

The measure would make these strikes treasonable and would provide for the incarceration or participation a prison sentence of twenty-five years without commutation or parole, or the extreme penalty of execution should a death occur directly or indirectly attributable to the disturbance.

The action has recalled a recent remark by Chairman Sumners, of the Judiciary committee, to which this bill was referred, that his committee would not hesitate to report out legislation prescribing the electric chair for enemies of the defense program should the strike menace increase. Apparently the Ford bill is in response to that inspiration.

Both the suggestion and the bill are the outcome of hysteria and both should be considered by the House. This certainly is not a sensible approach to the problem, which experience indicates cannot be solved by repression. But both represent a danger signal resulting from the strike menace to which all concerned should take heed.

An Overbalancing Legislative Debit

POST MORTEM of the recent session of the General Assembly at Annapolis are bringing to emphasis a few good things accomplished but on the whole a rather large debit balance to which few members of the majority party can point with pride.

The outstanding achievement on the credit side of the book was the revision of the indefensible income tax law enacted by the preceding legislature which was a monstrosity if ever there was one. Through the commendable persistence of the minority and also in consequence of a widespread protest from an outraged public, the rates were reduced, though not to the point which they might have been in all reasonable-ness, and, what is more important, the most of the inequalities and discriminations contained in the former measures were corrected.

Another worthy achievement was the enactment of the fireworks restriction measure, a humanitarian law that should long since have been placed upon the statute books but which is now there after a persistent crusade of some twenty years and in consequence of an overwhelming public demand.

A few other commendable though less important measures were enacted. But the debit side of the ledger contains a long account of failures and neglected opportunities, in the latter of which the legislators regrettably glossed over the most of the excellent work done for it by the State Legislative Council.

Defeat of the judiciary reform measure was a grave mistake. The outstanding fizzle, however, was the action on the state budget. Its excessive total, though cut somewhat in recognition of the activities of citizens' tax committees, is indefensible, particularly with regard to the creation of more jobs for administration and the tremendous expansion in the state salary lists both through these added jobs and through increases for existing jobholders. No sound reason was advanced for not keeping the budget total to the approximate level of the present biennium in view of the great national emergency. But it seems that the majority members were out for all they could get and got all they possibly could. This deplorable repudiation of the worthy promises made two years since in behalf of state economy by far overshadows the few items for which the session, now happily in history, deserves any credit.

Defense Production Should Be Shared

CONCERN has been expressed in several quarters over the allocation of the defense contracts for which such large appropriations have recently been made. Here are some of the facts.

The Temporary National Economic Council states in its report to Congress that eighty per cent of the work has been awarded to sixty-two companies and related groups; that four states have received nearly forty per cent of the defense contracts and that the OPM is becoming "an instrumentality of economic concentration the like of which the world has never seen."

To this is added the testimony of the William White committee, contained in a circular to all its branches, that "out of approximately 8,800 of the largest machine shops in the country, 6,650 have not received any prime defense contracts; out of 130,000 industries capable of producing defense materials, only 1,300 have received prime defense contracts."

It adds that "nothing short of maximum output from every available factory, large and small, is adequate for the country's needs."

Such concentration was inevitable in the first phase of the defense program. Only the largest factories were able to meet these new and vast demands. But that is no longer the case. This time has come when this monopoly control of basic production begins to look, to quote again the TNEC, like "curtailed production for selfish ends." For several reasons this must not be allowed to continue.

In the first place, in the interest of defense, it is imperative that the larger firms farm out the work to the smaller. Only in this way will production be geared to its full capacity. Second, for the sake of fairness and morale, both the profits and difficulties of this program should be distributed among as large a number of Americans as possible.

Such wider distribution would give a chance to non-defense companies to stay in business in the face of curtailment of certain defense materials. It would safeguard the larger companies against over-expansion which might bring disaster when the arms boom collapses, as it inevitably will.

The Moon may explode, writes an astronomer. If it does, it is sure to blow a lot of song writers right out of business.

It is hard to understand those naval writers who refer to a ship as "she" and then boldly remark that she is "over-age."

A sure way of getting politicians interested in the people is to have the people get suddenly interested in the politicians.

Costly Whistling

By MARSHALL MASLIN

When I was a child of seven years, my friends filled my pockets with pennies. I went directly to a shop where they sold toys and being charmed with the sound of a whistle, that I met, by the way, in the hands of another boy, I voluntarily offered and gave all my money for one. I then came home and went whistling all over the house, much pleased with my whistle, but disturbing all the family.

My brothers and sisters and cousins, understanding the bargain I had made, told me I had given four times as much for it as it was worth; but me in mind what good things I might have bought with the rest of my money; and laughed at me so much for my folly that I cried with vexation, and the reflection gave me more chagrin than the whistle gave me pleasure.

This, however, was afterwards of use to me, the impression continuing on my mind, so that often, when I was tempted to buy some unnecessary thing, I said to myself, "Don't give too much for the whistle," and I saved my money.

As I grew up, came into the world and observed the action of men, I thought I met with many, very many, who gave too much for the whistle.

As you know, it was Benjamin Franklin—not I—who had that experience with the whistle. And forever afterwards, whenever he met a man who sacrificed his repose, liberty or virtue to achieve his ambitions—or a man who ruined his own affairs in pursuit of popularity—or a miser who lost esteem and friendship in accumulating wealth—or a "beautiful, sweet-tempered girl married to an ill-natured brute of a husband—hed say to himself, "What a pity that they should pay so much for their whistles!"

But as far as I can learn, the wise Benjamin Franklin did not walk the street telling other people they had paid too much for their whistles. He pitied them, but he kept his tongue in his cheek. If they wished to pay too much for the whistle, let them pay. He would warn them in advance, but he would not remind them afterwards of their foolishness.

Wise old Ben! He minded his own business and preserved his friendships. He would not say, "I told you so," because he knew that saying those four words is also a way of paying too much for the whistle of your own pride.

War Trend Should Halt Pushers Here, Gen. Johnson Says

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, April 3.—The apparent rapid rush of events to stop Hitler in the opening of the 1941 spring offensive in World War II is encouraging.

Perhaps it is too early to begin drawing any conclusions about them. War is a good deal like a football game. Regardless of spectacular plays and advances either way, there is no pay-off until the final figures are flashed on the scoreboard and we can really see whose number is up.

But there is one thought arising from all these world-shaping events upon which this column has always insisted and which seems to be emphasized by everything that is happening now. It is that in the whole history of the world the rise of any great and menacing power was invariably begotten and inspired a counter power which, in the end, has always in one way or another checked and frequently destroyed it—Carthage was stopped by Rome, Rome by barbarian resistance, the barbarian kingdoms by several spiritual and military risings.

Various Examples

For example, those of Christianity, the religion of Mohammed and the remarkable interlude of Genghis Khan. Spain, which threatened to gobble the globe, stubbed her toe on the rising sea-power of England. Napoleon overreached in Russia and William Hobenzollern took in too much territory.

With these invariable examples in mind, it has always seemed to me that before committing our country heading to the terrible hazards, costs and sacrifices of war, our obvious common-sense course was to make ourselves as strong as our resources would permit as fast as our genius for unity, production, organization and action would take us—and then keep out in what strategists call "a position in readiness." To watch the ranging of forces in an alien world in which our material interest is next to nothing. That began to be advocated in this space, not just in 1940, but six years ago.

It was urged to the contrary that the Axis was about to dominate the earth and that urging was by people who didn't say in public but made no bones in private about their thought that the fate of humanity depends on our all-out engagement in bloody war. It was up to us to become the counter-power which would redress the wrongs of all the world.

Not Reconcilable

Yet the essential interests and known ambitions of Hitler can never be composed with those of Japan, or even, in the end, could the original Axis partners, hit and miss, have followed their territorial aspirations without clashing. We had and have no territorial aspirations colliding with any of these. Why should we plunge unthinkingly into bloody war among these great opposing forces in Europe, Africa and Asia? Why should we assume financial and more sacrificial responsibilities for the remaking of the world?

We were told that it is an absolute necessity to save ourselves. It surely does not seem so now. If such slight powers as Yugoslavia and Greece can give Hitler even momentary pause on his very border, why should so great a power as ours, behind 3,000 miles of sea water, get into a panic of fear and ill-considered action?

Defense Supported

This is not to criticize any defensive steps taken or policies (so far as they have been revealed) by our government in the past two years. Except for the terrible delay and blundering in American disarmament and certain questions of method rather than of principle, those things have not been opposed here. With constantly descending

Roosevelt Indicates a Desire To Keep Labor Problem within His Own Orbit

By MARK SULLIVAN

WASHINGTON, April 3.—At President Roosevelt's press conference, the first after his return from vacation, the newsmen entered with an eye for the president's appearance. What they found was assuring. Those who made notes put down such words as "rested," "tanned," "in good humor."

Mark Sullivan

The incident reflects how much the affairs of the United States and the world, are geared into the way one man feels, and the way his state of feeling from time to time may affect his temperament, and hence his utterances and actions and attitudes.

Maryland Farm Musings

By the Extension Service of the University of Maryland

Ornamental garden plants which are not injured or only slightly attacked by the Japanese beetle are calceolaria, coreopsis, goldenrod, nasturtium, petunia, sweet pea, carnation, cosmos, iris, pachysandra, phlox, tulip, chrysanthemum, four-o'clock, larkspur, pansy, poppy, violet, columbine, gladiolus, lily, peony, and snapdragon, according to Dr. George Langford, specialist in insect control for the University of Maryland Extension Service.

Maryland 4-H Club members will have an opportunity to demonstrate the humane methods they employ on the farm in caring for livestock in a statewide contest sponsored by the Humane Society of Baltimore County, it is announced by E. G. Jenkins, state boys' club agent.

County teams will give demonstrations at the Maryland State fair this September and the winner of first place will receive an all-expense trip to the National 4-H Club Congress in Chicago. Silver trophies will go to the demonstration teams winning second and third places.

Some annuals which are half-hardy require a long time to come into bloom so it may be an advantage to give them an early start by sowing the seed in the house or in a hotbed in March or early April, according to W. R. Ballard, specialist in horticulture for the Extension Service. He includes in this list of annuals China asters, sweet sultan, cypress vine, strawflower, hummanna, flax, lobelia, Job's tears, petunias, phlox, drummond, scabiosa, and verbena. Many of these can be planted out of doors after danger of frost is past, but they will then bloom later in the season.

By producing more than a half-ton of butterfat in a year, a purebred Holstein-Friesian cow owned by John M. Dennis, Jr., of Ridgewood, Baltimore county, has earned the distinction of being placed on the national honor roll of 1,000 pound producers. It is announced by the Holstein-Friesian Association of America. SX Colantha Westview, known in the registry of the Holstein-Friesian Association, produced 27,082 pounds of milk with 1,022.4 pounds of butterfat in 365 days. She was milked three times daily and averaged seventy-four pounds of milk daily for the entire year.

where that device of cross-questioning would lead to.

Stopped with Gesture

Another newsmen, taking up the trail, asked a question beginning "Would it be a fair assumption that—" This question, Mr. Roosevelt stopped in the middle, with a gesture and a humorous grunt which said that he was too old a bird to let that kind of salt fall on his feathers.

Only once were those presidential feathers even faintly ruffled, either by embarrassment or irritation. Only once did it seem that the newsmen were too hot upon him, and too successfully for his equanimity. The questions that fairly disturbed the presidential poise were in the same field, about labor strikes, and may have had significance.

One question was, "Are you pleased with the record to date of the new Labor Mediation board?" Mr. Roosevelt, showing a bit of impatience, replied that he could not answer questions as to whether he was pleased at one thing or angry at another thing. Yet newsmen might have recalled that Mr. Roosevelt does like to answer this kind of question on occasions when his answer would have a public effect that he desires, and would not reveal anything he prefers to withhold.

Sharp Reply Given

Another question, in the same field, was about the message which O.P.M. Director Knudsen and Secretary of the Navy Knox sent some days ago demanding resumption of operations at Allis-Chalmers. The question asked Mr. Roosevelt was: "Were you acquainted with their action before it was done?" Rather sharply Mr. Roosevelt replied that he regarded this question as almost inquisitorial, that he could not answer this kind of question these days.

On the whole, from this press conference and many other evidences, one gets a definite impression. It is that Mr. Roosevelt wishes to keep the labor situation in suspense, without definite action at this time. And also that he prefers to keep the labor situation within his own orbit, that he wishes to avert any action by Congress.

One wonders. Is the present a time when it is wise for any individual to try to keep too many things within his own orbit? Not only are the problems and conditions numerous, complex, sudden and eruptive. Also, every prudent individual must recognize that there are periods when the strongest cannot be immune from fatigue and variations of temperament. Hardly ever was group control and group responsibility so desirable.

A Public Duty To Perform

From the Wheeling, W. Va., Intelligencer

Mr. Martin, in agreeing to retain chairmanship of the Republican National Committee, made some observations on national unity which merit repetition. There is, he agreed, a genuine need for national unity in forwarding defense plans. He insisted, however, that such unity must not be purchased at the cost of destroying the two-party system, and added:

"A vigorous, courageous Republican Party is essential to police and audit the New Deal administration as it revels in the spending of thirty or forty billions of dollars and in

Exchange Brokers Have Tough Time Now, Hill Reports

By EDWIN C. HILL

A stock Exchange seat sells for $25,000. They sit up around $600,000 in 1929. Curb seats are around $1,000 and they tell me that the Produce Exchange will settle eagerly for $100, less than the initiation fee of any fairly exclusive labor union.

That's getting down to the 1898 level, when Stock Exchange seats went for $20,000. They are a few of the old-timers of the Street still putting in a full-day shift around the brokerage offices. Some of them are there because they can't afford not to be. They doze off in their chairs, or do a crossword puzzle advance in a while they'll shake a leg just long enough to scalp an elixir and then lapse into dreams of five-million-share days and lunch at Mouquin's. Many of them now eat at the Automat.

Edwin C. Hill

The Automat Illures

Ed Littleton, an old settler in the lower end of the island, who used to be knee-deep in good finding money, tell me that there is something about the Automat which attracts speculators. "You get a fistful of nickels," said Mr. Littleton, "and look over this board for a good play. In the 1st place, you feel safe. You know it aren't going to get caught shod on anything. Maybe you plunked a three or four-nickel dish you never tried before. It turns out all right, and you know the government can't take it away from you. If it's extra good, you feel you have something right out of the feed, and you keep it to yourself."

"The Automat has been a great help to us financiers the days. In fact, it has given me a splendid idea for a good promotion which I shall try to sell to the atomat people. They deal a spec stock issue, and every so often there's a piece of pie or bun which has a stock certificate wrapped up in it, or maybe a lifetime meal ticket. The boys would certainly like to fix up something like that to make it worth while. But I suppose the SEC would jump them if they try anything as sensible as that."

At Ritzy Places

They used to eat at Savarin's at the Banker's Club, or at the downtown Mouquins, on the north side of Fulton, between Broadway and Nassau. On the other side of the street was Libby's famous fish house, favorite luncheon place of brokers, where you picked your oysters while a gargantuan oyster-opener, he must have weighed 300 pounds, sprung them open for your fastidious appraisal.

The old John Street oyster houses also must figure a lot in the dreams of the snooters in the customers' rooms. They used to telephone the day before to have an English mutton shop hung for them. It would be about the thickness of a fair-sized paving slab, served with black pickled walnuts, a baked potato and a bottle of ale. Rarely did a woman lunch at any of these places, but when that happened there was a great commotion.

Men patrons always ate from the weathered old bare tables. But when a woman entered, the waiters always broke out a table cloth. There were, of course, only men waiters, mostly old men, and having a table cloth was to them something like rigging a clipper-ship in a gale. They always seemed clumsy and embarrassed.

Happy Days

Christmas week was a happy time, with a bottle of old Spanish sherry, at each luncheon, on the house. The Astor House specialized in oysters, and drew a full line of unrecruited old American trade with its ostentatious American dishes—a big slab of apple pie, or pork and beans, with plenty of pork, ham and eggs and whatnot, with no foreign entanglement whatsoever.

Brokers usually would be identified by a fur coat. If it happened to be winter time, or at any rate, a fur collar, and a nice Malacca stick, and frequently by a boutonniere. You don't see anybody carrying a stick any more. The automobile had a lot to do with that, and the Street just isn't in the mood for a fur coat or a nosegay. At the old guard around the brokers' offices still keeps itself pretty well spruced up. Considering the punishment they've been taking, they look remarkably fit.

Mr. Littleton enlightens me somewhat on that. "The real honest-to-goodness speculator is never discouraged," he said. "He knows that some day sometime he's going to hit a jackpot. Investors sometimes quit; speculators never."

the possession of vast and unparalleled powers granted it only because of the urgent needs of national defense."

The common sense of this observation should appeal to all fair minded persons regardless of policies. Nothing could be more deadly than the absence of able, vigorous, watchful opposition at a time like this. The Republican party has a public duty to perform which has no necessary relation to success at the polls.

Dates Are Selected for Allegheny Mountains Open Tennis Meet Here

The Allegheny Mountains Open Championship to be held in Cumberland July 30, 31, August 1, 2 and 3 has received the sanction of the Middle Atlantic Division of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, L. E. Van Sant announced last night.

Van Sant said the dates are considerably earlier than in previous years and pointed out the advantage of holding the championships at the height of the summer season which will not conflict with other Easter tournaments.

The local committee decided to try a five-day tournament this year instead of the week-end tourneys of previous years.

Last year the Allegheny Mountains Tournament was a success from every standpoint with a large list of entries which includes some of the best men and women tennis players in the East.

This year the local committee met early in February and is already working to make the standard of the tournament even higher than last year.

A number of dances, parties and other social events will be arranged for entertainment of visiting players and guests.

A Rosy Picture for Spring

This ring-around-the-rosy fashion may be a hint that beauty must be natural in 1941. At any rate, Jane Pickett, songstress, wears a wealth of fresh rose "jewelry" designed by Irene Hayes, New York flower stylist. The necklace has clips to hold the small buds, and the bracelet is a corsage with the stems wrapped around her arms. The waistline corsage is smart for formal hostess gowns.

Today's GARDEN-GRAPH

By DEAN HALLIDAY

(Distributed by Central Press Association)
SECRET OF SUCCESS WITH SWEET PEAS

Early sowing, the first secret of success with the growing of sweet peas, permits them to grow a good root before the hot weather sets in. Of course, they cannot be grown outdoors before the ground is workable, but they can be started indoors or in a frame earlier and then planted outdoors at the first opportunity.

As illustrated in the Garden-Graph, plant the sweet pea seeds in three-inch pots, three seeds to a pot. This allows approximately an inch per sweet pea for root growth.

The seeds should be planted one-half inch deep in the soil, watered carefully and set in a warm, dark place where the temperature is from 60 to 65 degrees. Check frequently to see if more moisture is needed. As soon as the seedlings have sprouted, move them to a light window to keep them dwarfed and strong-growing, instead of tall and spindly.

Encourage Youths In Self-Denial, Parents Urged

But Don't Force Children To Join Church, Psychologist Warns

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

During Lent many persons who are religious practice some special self-denials for their souls' sake. I am very sure they derive character as well as spiritual values from this practice. Indeed, it seems to me that one of the greatest returns from sincere religious efforts comes through self-denial for an ideal, so long as such self-denial does not infringe upon the rights of others. Even limiting the amount we eat at any time, so as not to grow too stout, requires character. Some of us were not brought up with the religious discipline for which Lent has so much significance. Nevertheless, we should be able to appreciate the values others get from Lenten practices and admire them for their ability to stick to their ideals and to discipline themselves accordingly.

If, therefore, children or youths who are sacrificing something come to your home during Lent, don't tempt them. Rather try to encourage them in their self-discipline, knowing they are cultivating good character qualities from it. It seems to me that those parents who observe the spirit of Lent in their homes will do well to aim to win their children to co-operate rather than to try to coerce them.

Don't Force Children

As we approach the Easter season, many parents and church teachers will be putting emotional pressure on children and youths to become church members. A few of these parents and teachers, in their sincere zeal, will be tempted to press a little too far. If they do, the ultimate outcome might be the very opposite to what they desire. There is danger from too much play upon the child's heart-strings just as there is also danger when pressure reaches the point of coercion. We need to remember, too, that while it is possible to force a child or youth to go through the form, we can't dictate sincere beliefs. We can only win them.

We are near the time of year when, all over the United States, thousands of children, youths and adults will publicly become church members. Right then and immediately thereafter is the psychological time to enlist these new members in active church participation. So often they soon grow indifferent and cold toward the religious cause they have espoused. To embark upon any such cause without forging ahead and keeping the purpose alive may prove harmful. Therefore, parents, church school teachers and the older members of the church need to feel a responsibility.

Parents who really care can afford to discipline themselves, even though they suppose they do not need the spiritual values from church attendance. They should go regularly in order to make it easier for their children to keep alive their newly-acquired religious obligations. Anyway, in these trying times, religious efforts will be good for all of us. As with the beautiful in literature, art, music, we tend to cultivate and keep alive our spiritual tastes as we exercise them and mingle with others who gain values from them.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. What do you consider the best way to cure nail-biting in the child?
A. Say nothing about it in the presence of the child. Work on yourself and the entire family to create a more serene family atmosphere, and protect him from undue worries and excitement. Expect improvement only after some weeks or months.

Q. How many words are in the vocabulary of the average child entering school?

A. About 2500. By sending me a self-addressed stamped envelope in care of this paper, you may receive a chart of vocabularies of children at various ages.

SALLY'S SALLIES

A husband works himself to death in order to pay for the labor-saving devices his wife buys.

Q. My boy 10 years old bolts his food and hurries out to play. How may I teach him to eat more slowly?
A. Not by lecturing and scolding him. Tell him he must not leave the table until the end of twenty minutes.

Q. Why does the youth so often utter "ah" and "and" in speaking in the classroom?

A. These words serve as fillers in the painful intervals when words and ideas lag. We aid the youth at home or school to use these fillers less as we help him to feel more comfortable when he speaks and more at ease.

Absent Mindedness At the Zenith

MOUNT OLIVE, N. C. (AP) — A visiting Goldsboro man invited an absent-minded friend to have lunch with him.

When in the restaurant, the guest complained that he didn't know what had become of his appetite — he just wasn't hungry at all.

"Beg pardon, sir," a smiling waitress said, "but it's no wonder. You just finished your lunch about ten minutes ago."

What a Guy Is Winfree Harrah

WELCH, W. Va., April 2 (AP) — At first blush, Winfree Harrah appears to be the answer to a truant officer's dream, but then on the other hand, if all pupils were like Winfree, the truant officer wouldn't have a job. So— Anyway, Winfree Harrah is in the seventh grade at Welch Junior high school, and in seven years he hasn't missed a day. "I have always liked school," he explains, "and I hope to keep a perfect attendance record until I graduate."

Winfree says he enjoys his studies, admires his teachers and is interested in school activities. What a guy!

'Pay or Pensions'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An echo of highly controverted Ham and Eggs pension plan of California was heard in a suit to obtain an initial petition, filed by Lawrence W. Allen, leader of the $30-a-week Thursday movement. Allen's new organization demands "pay checks or pensions for all."

Nation's Appetite For Spuds Waning?

AUGUSTA, Me. (AP) — The per capita consumption of potatoes has dropped, says Edgar W. Russ, Maine potato grower and member of the governor's executive council, partly because American people do not work enough to develop appetites they once boasted.

In the "good old days," says Russ, people worked enough to be "really hungry." But now, with a shorter day, and less labor required, the ordinary person eats but one large meal a day.

A second reason for a drop from 42 to 2.8 bushels in per capita consumption, Russ believes, is improved transportation which brings fresh fruits and vegetables to the doors of all America, lessening the need for potatoes.

Sidewalk Scribblers Rouse Chief's Ire

WELCH, W. Va., April 2 (AP)—"I admire," said Police Chief Harry Chaffins, "our students' artistic ability and their urge to write, but if they don't confine their talents to the school room, I'm going to have some of them down at the station."

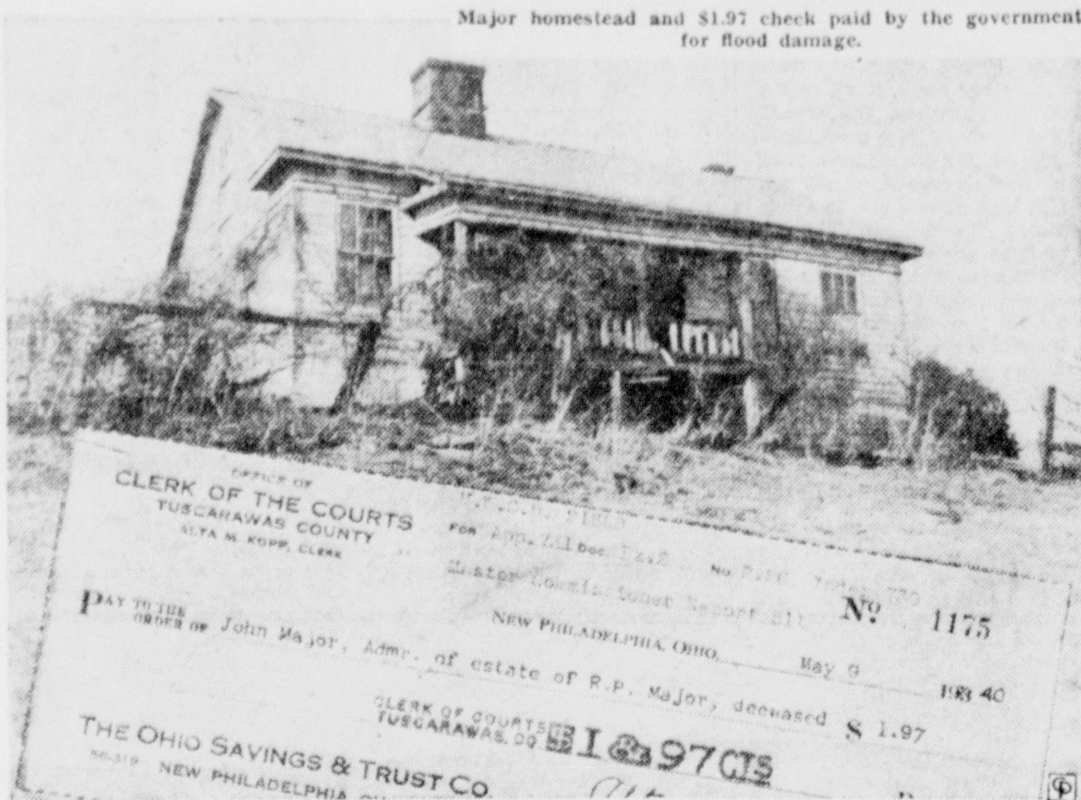

It seems the chief's dander had been aroused by the appearance of chalk drawings and scribbles on sidewalks, store fronts and apartment building walls. Among them, he said, were messages of the "Johnny loves Mary" type. Maybe it's a sign of spring.

Biblical Moses Delivered His People from Egypt To 'Higher Ground,' but Mrs. Major Waits Vainly For Deliverance and Gets Check for $1.97

Major homestead and $1.97 check paid by the government for flood damage.

By W. H. McWILLIAMS
General Press Correspondent

SEWELLSVILLE, O., March 3—... Deliver you unto a land which flows with milk and honey."

Mrs. Emma Major, 70, thumbed through the leaves of a heavy old family Bible and read about Moses who was ordered to deliver his people from the land of Egypt to "higher ground."

Down "in the land of Egypt"—not Egypt of old, but "Egypt" of Kirkwood township, Belmont county, Ohio, Mrs. Emma Major sits before the stone fireplace of her homestead and wonders if there is a "Moses" today who will "deliver HER" unto a land that flows with milk and honey.

She literally is marooned on her own homestead, surrounded by the mud and the water and the flood of a government water control dam—and the government has sent her a check for the damage—a check for $1.97.

For 40 years, Mrs. Major, a widow now, has lived on the homestead in western Belmont county. On the farm of 97½ acres in the fertile Egypt valley rest the same old humble home where she raised four children to manhood and womanhood; on the same farm the Major livelihood was gained for years and years.

Then came the dam up at the mouth of the broad valley, at Piedmont, several miles away. Neighbors' farms were purchased by the government agency and families moved "unto another land." But the Major homestead, for some reason, was not bought and only an easement secured, for which the government recompensed the widow for damages resulting from the flooding and backing up of the waters from the artificial lake.

$1.97 for 40 Years
The widow never cashed the government check for $1.97. She still has it—it's all that is left of 40 years of toilsome life in the very midst of one of Ohio's richest and most fertile valleys!

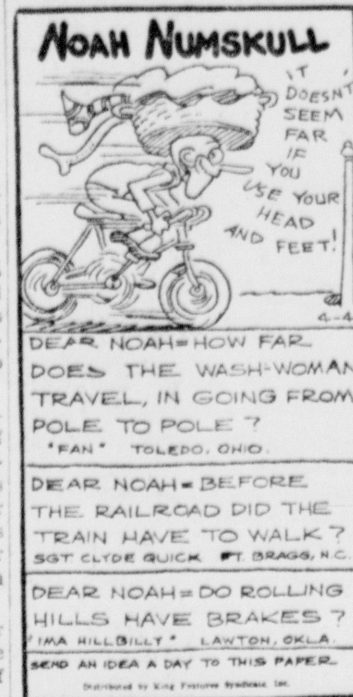

The Major farm now is useless, valueless and undesirable. The old homestead is marooned four months out of every year because adjacent roads are flooded by the backed-up waters of the lake. Sometimes the water near their place is 10 feet deep.

"Why, the nearest doctor is four miles away over the hill on foot," Mrs. Major explained, "and footness only knows what would happen if sickness came to this house."

Neighborhood and lonely Mrs. Major sits beside the old stone fireplace where, for 40 years she rocked her babies and hummed the folk lore of the hills. At night she gazes through tear-dimmed eyes at the ancient pictures that have adorned the walls of her home for near half a century of time, and wonders, she says, if the ancestors she sees there were "in bondage" too. She rocks in the same arm chair that graced the room when she first went to "housekeepin' back when McKinley was president," and she listens to the ticking and the "strike" of the old clock on the mantelpiece, where it was placed—bright and new—on her wedding day.

"I don't know what I am going to do. There is still a mortgage on the old place for money we borrowed years ago. No one now ever would think of buying the place, because if we can't get out, how would anybody get in?"

That about expresses the true situation. The $1.97 check is from the Muskingum Watershed Conservancy district, agent of the multi-million-dollar project, and is BERN, Switzerland (AP)—Suckling pig, formerly a delicacy reserved for weddings and special occasions, has become almost commonplace on Swiss menus.

It has been impossible to import enough fodder and oilcake to fatten all the pigs farrowed, so that many more than usual have been killed young.

Swiss authorities decided, in view of the situation, that suckling pig should not fall under rationing regulations.

POINT PLEASANT, W. Va., April 2 (AP)—William Cleveland Bowie, editor of the Point Pleasant Register, is quitting the Fourth Estate to enter the ministry.

Known to newspapermen of two states through his connections with the Martinsburg Journal, the Wheeling Intelligencer, and the Baltimore Sun over a period of nearly a dozen years, Bowie is a graduate of Penn State college.

Bowie already has been made a postulant by Bishop R. E. L. Strider, and in August will enter Virginia Theological seminary, preliminary to becoming an Episcopal minister.

He was a member of the Penn State Glee club while in college, and was one of the club that made a singing tour of Europe. In recent years he has sung frequently in churches of the state and on the radio.

Rug for a Cozy Corner

AP Feature Service

A red, white and blue rug is in order for sprucing up your cozy corner this spring. It ought to pick up other nearby colors, perhaps a bit of the flower tone in the chair upholstery. The shaggy scatter rug is "on the square." You can make it this way: Mark the design on a rug canvas. Then make bundles of rug yarn by winding the yarn several times around a piece of cardboard. Slip it off and tie the yarn at the center. Cut the ends or leave them uncut according to your choice. Next sew the bundles on the canvas.

Including the Way of a Maid with a Man

BY JOSEPH BARTON

"We're giving Monty a party on his birthday, Eben," Jed told the young son of the Cornwall family. "People in Fox Junction, particularly the ones who worked in the town's one big industrial plant, the Cornwall Foundry Company, like to invite Eben to their

"You're Trying to Bait Me," Eben said. "We'd all admire to have you come!" Monty's coming of age, isn't he? Eben asked politely from behind the grille of the company cashier's office where he worked. The foreman grunted.

Coming 20 this birthday, Eben! Don't seem like all you kids've grown up into men already, though you're a little older." He snatched a speculative look at the handsome Cornwall boy. "You figure on bringing Cornelia West, naturally?"

"I haven't taken any girl but Cornelia anywhere for the last year, Jed. Don't intend to, either!" "I'd ask her in a hurry if I was you," Jed advised, his sharp eyes fixing Eben. "Not that it's any of my business, but I heard tell that the young farmer boy your dad hired in the casting shop where Monty works—well, he's kind of brain about saving his sweat on Cornelia herself. Likely, he's just talking!"

"Don't listen to such gossip, Jed!" Eben returned rather sharply, his dark face reddening angrily. "Pat Holden is a haymaker from out in Kansas some place! Think that a sensible girl would fall for a poor laborer like him? Besides, he's only been in Fox Junction about a month."

Cornelia was no fool, he was certain. Some day he'd inherit the works and be somebody. But the girl was capable of using her own mind.

"Are you going to Monty's party with me?" he asked her directly at in the casting shop and he lives in the rooming house down the street from our house. But I'll be glad to go with you if I decide not to accept Pat's invitation!"

Eben blushed, but held his temper. "You're trying to bait me, Cornelia!" he accused. "You wouldn't go with that—that poor farmer, or whatever he is!"

"I'm free, white and old enough to make up my own mind, Eben!" Cornelia told him with composure. "Personally, he looks like a nice boy to me. We'll see about the party!"

The owner's son couldn't believe it when Cornelia decided to attend the party with the red-haired young nobody from Kansas who had asked her, bold as brass, when he knew full well that she was the favorite of the richest young man in Fox Junction.

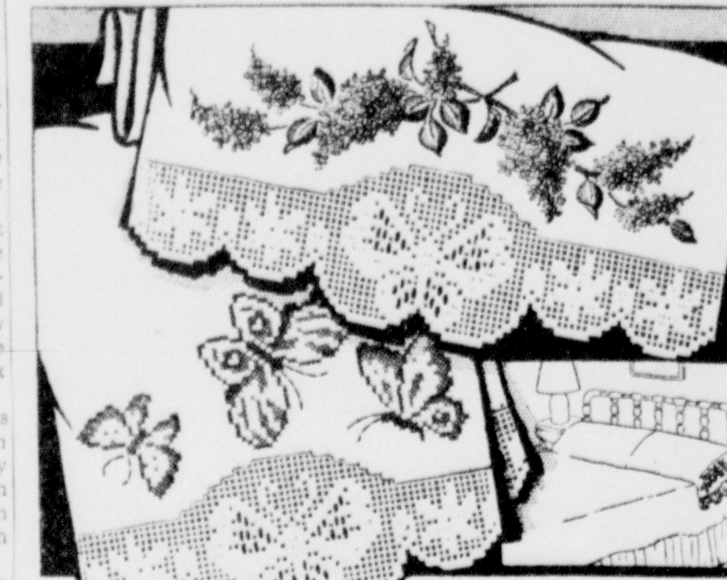

"I'll have him fired quick as lightning!" he raged to himself on the day after the party. The party itself was unimportant. The main thing was that, for the first time in his experience, someone in town had dared to cross him.

In the weeks that followed, Eben revolved many schemes for ridding himself of his rival. The bumpkin who was interloping was a problem. He was quick to learn, he was willing and a hard worker. Instead of being dismissed as Eben hoped after he gave his dad a few direct hints, Pat Holden was given a promotion as straw boss of his shop!

"Look here, Holden," he finally told the enterprising young rival one evening after deciding to settle the question once and for all. He had waited outside the shop door for Pat to file past the time clock and punch his time card. Cornelia is being nice to you, but you ought not to impose on her good nature too much by hanging around her!"

Meaning that you don't like being edged out of the running by a better man, I suppose? Pat guessed, untruffled. "Well, Cornelia has a good mind, Cornwall, and she's used it. She intends to marry me next Saturday. Any comment?"

Eben didn't argue. He didn't believe it. Only when the act was too real to be denied would he admit that Cornelia had turned him down. She and Pat Holden were married by the city clerk right after luncheon on Saturday. Eben met them as they walked out of the city hall afterward.

things that make him what he is. I don't care if he hasn't a cent. He'll get somewhere."

"Just a minute, you two!" Pat broke into the dialogue with amused eyes. "You're both blowing off steam over nothing!"

"Eben will see that you're discharged, darling. I know that. But I won't mind scripping a bit until we get a start somewhere else—wherever you say. And I have a bit saved!" Pat kissed her then, right on the steps of city hall.

"We'll go back home, darling. I've had enough bumbling around, anyway, getting a little experience in the world. Dad and I are partners in a little farm out in Kansas, so we'll get along. Maybe I forgot to mention . . . our farm covers more than eight square miles of prime wheat land, and every mile's

Inviting The Enemy To Attack

When an army is in hostile territory, every precaution is taken to guard against attacks. Carelessness invites attacks. Carelessness about Nature's warnings invites attacks in people too. Ross Hamilton, 270 E. Main St., Uniontown, Pa., says: I was careless about constipation and it brought on attacks of rheumatic-like aches and pains that had my back stiff as a board. That's all over now though. World's Tonic took care of me fine. Constipation is often a factor in stiff backs, joints and aching limbs. Heed its warning if you would be 100% efficient. World's Tonic contains many roots, barks and herbs from various old countries where many of our strong and healthy ancestors originated. Walks 33 Miles To Report for Draft

BALTIMORE, April 3 (AP) — Edward Bowen, 24, negro selective serviceman of Berlin, Md., was hours late in reporting to the draft induction station here.

"Where have you been?" an officer asked him.

"Walking," Bowen replied, looking for a place to sit.

When he was made comfortable he told his story.

He got up at 5 a. m. Tuesday and walked to Snow Hill, missing the Baltimore bus by two minutes. He then started out for Salisbury—hoofing it all the way—to catch another.

Total distance, he estimated, was 33 miles.

TRAPPE, Md. (AP) — Residents demanded a by-pass to divert traffic when a new bridge routed trucks and cars through the middle of town.

Day-to-Day Picture of Army Life Painted by Private W. W. Sluss Jr.

Prominent Frostburg
Draftee Writes of Routine at Camp Lee

FROSTBURG, April 3.—William W. Sluss Jr., Frostburg grocer and former exalted ruler of Frostburg Elks Lodge No. 470, who left here March 25 as leader of a group of thirty-three draftees sent from the town to Camp Lee, Va., for military training, is now located at Camp Lee, Va.

Over the signature, Private William W. Sluss, Company D, Fifth Medical Training Battalion, Medical Replacement Center, Camp Lee, Va., Private Sluss gives a day-to-day account of his experience from the morning the draftees left Frostburg until April 1.

Beginning March 25, he writes, "Apparently the departure of the boys was a painful experience. The leaving behind of one's family as the thirty-three draftees marched from the local office to the bus terminal was a serious affair to most of us. Most of the boys were silent, eyes were anything but dry, and everyone seemed very intent on the fact that he was going to serve his government and leave all friends behind."

"I overheard one mother say, 'My son has always been a good boy and I feel sure he is going to be all right.' At 10:30 a. m., we boarded on the train. The food, all very good, consisted of baked ham, green beans, baked potatoes, salad, coffee, rolls and ice cream. We arrived in Baltimore at 12:45 and by 1:15 p. m. the examinations started and by 4:30 a group of 205 men of which ten percent were colored, had been examined. At 5:20 p. m. forty-six of us left for Camp Lee, Va., our crowd including Greco, Bowers, Lewis, Taylor, Cooper, Grindie, Layman and Pasken."

"March 26—Out of bed at 6 a. m. and after mopping bunk house, making beds, cleaning spittoons and sweeping steps, we had breakfast. At 10 a. m., we were interviewed and given another examination, consisting of 160 questions which had to be answered in forty minutes. We were then free to loaf around until chow time. Most of the boys spread out on their bunks talking to no one, just sort of being serious about the whole thing. The non-commissioned officer gave us our first lesson in commands and one hour of drilling and then we were issued clothing."

"March 27—Up at 5:45 a. m., mop, make beds, clean-up, go to chow, come back, drill. We are now getting acquainted with the army way of life. After lunch we fell in for two inoculations, one in the arm and one in the shoulder blade. At evening we were in our first retreat, with 600 men lined on two sides of the field. In the center, the bugle, the flag and the guard of honor. After retreat, there was chow and bed."

"March 28—Moving day; today we were all called out and told to pack our bags and be ready to leave. Some of our original bunch were sent to the Fifth and some to the Sixth Battalion. Of the thirty-three who came down on the train, the only one left with me is Ralph Taylor. There is one good thing about our bunch being placed in the medical training center—we will have only two weeks basic training and for the following ten weeks we will attend school and Draft Board No. 4 for a year's term will fill jobs in regular army posts."

"March 29—Moved into new bunk houses with a capacity for fifty men and three officers. Spent the day cleaning up."

"March 30—Taylor and I had K. P. duty, working in the kitchen. From now on, I will never mind eating in a mess hall. We scrubbed tables, chairs and floors after each meal, boiled dishes, knives and forks and spent the rest of the time peeling potatoes. We worked fourteen hours and in the evening were really ready for bed."

"March 31—Up at 5:45, exercises at 6:15, breakfast at 7, then mop, clean up and stand drill at 10 o'clock. That will be our program for the next two weeks."

"Our battalion is made up of four companies, A, B, C and D. Company A is to be trained at stretch-bearers, Company B as first aid men, Company C as truck drivers and mechanics and Company D as clerks for office work. In this bunk room we have three lawyers, two college professors, and about thirty per cent of the remainder are disagreeable men. The sergeant in charge has been in the regular army for about fifteen years and certainly knows army life."

This and That

to start its Eastern campaign April 12.

Preston M. Birch said his guess is that Hirsch has more likely prospects than ever before, while others were impressed by the speed and power of Dispoze, winner of two major stakes at Hialeah last winter and the Kentucky Derby favorite. They report Dispoze looks much better than his stablemate, Attention, which had the better record as a two-year-old.

Miss Dorothy Amick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Amick, of Hill Crest Drive, was a member of the Junior basketball team at Elmira college, Elmira, N. Y., which played the championship game of the year with the Senior team in the college gym Saturday March 29 with the Seniors winning by a close score. The game followed a demonstration of first air activities given by the department of physical education.

Since November, the Standard Red Cross First Aid course has been required of all freshmen, sophomores and juniors as part of the Elmira college national defense program. Seniors were not required to take the course but a number elected to do so. Students completing the course satisfactorily are certified by the National Red Cross as first aiders for a period of three years.

Mass Amick played volleyball last freshman year and both volleyball and basketball her sophomore year. She is also a member of the "Y" cabinet, Octagon staff and the Press Club.

The old California-Florida argument over which state has the better winter racing may be renewed at Bowie where horses from both states are quartered.

Handy Tom, a recent Santa Anita winner, won Tuesday's feature race, but Florida-campaigned horses gave him the most opposition in the stretch with Mrs. Ethel Jacob's Air Brigade running second, a half length behind, and John Greener's Clarksville, third.

Alfred Vanderbilt, Pimlico and Belmont Park president, who attended the opening at Bowie said horsemen have been generous in nominating their horses for his stakes, especially the $50,000 Preakness, to be run at Pimlico May 10.

Kenneth Griffith the scoring machine from Alderson-Broadus college at Philippi, W. Va., and Hank Luisetti, the former record holder from the West coast, are just two other basketball players as far as Humboldt, Tenn., fans are concerned.

They'll take blonde Louise Wilson, who's scored 4,014 points in her three years on the high school basketball team.

Six feet, one and one half inches tall, the 18-year-old forward covers the scoring court with unblatant speed, flipping the ball in with either hand and from all angles.

Louise scored 1,404 points in twenty-eight games her first year. In one game she tallied seventy-two points. That was her high mark until this year when Humboldt, in another regional tourney, crushed Hintersville 85-37 with Louise, contributing seventy-seven points.

a bit her second year, ringing up 1,258 points in twenty-five games. She finished the past season with 1,352, making her four thousandth point in the second quarter of the final game.

Control of Japanese Beetle Will Be Discussed Monday

Dr. George Langford, in charge of Japanese Beetle control work in Maryland, will be at the office of County Agent R. P. McHenry, Monday at 2:30 o'clock to demonstrate how it is hoped to control Japanese beetles by spreading "Milky White Disease."

According to McHenry, this new method of combating the disease seems to hold much promise in the ultimate control of the Japanese beetle. The demonstration will take about half an hour and Allegany county farmers and all people interested are invited to attend.

Honeymoon Gold

by PEGGY DERN

RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

SYNOPSIS

TOM FORMAN, husky, young, but out of work, prevents BETSY CARTER from committing suicide by drowning at a southern beach. When he tells her that he must be married to get a job as caretaker of Halcyon Island, owned by JORDAN MARKHAM, a wealthy invalid, she agrees to become his wife.

Tom takes her to introduce her to Markham, who tells them he wishes to give grants to facilities of his island for 30 days each to newlyweds. Tom and Betsy are to spend the honeymoon guests from among the applicants.

CHAPTER FIVE

BETSY WAS on her feet now, her face quite white, her eyes wide. "There's something you have to know about me, Mr. Markham, before you decide definitely that you want me for the job," she said clearly, avoiding Tom's startled eyes. "You've probably investigated Tom's background and references and all that—haven't you?"

"As a matter of fact, I have," answered Mr. Markham evenly. "I know beyond a doubt that he is exactly the man I want."

"But you probably won't want me when I tell you the truth about myself," said Betsy, speaking quite clearly though with an effort. "In the first place, I'm—not—not a GOOD girl."

"Oh, for Pete's sake!" Tom said sharply. But Mr. Markham held up a thin hand to silence Tom and his eyes met Betsy's straightly. Suppose you go on, my dear," he said quietly.

Betsy was scarlet now, her fingers twisting the silver cord that knotted the rose-colored velvet about her slender body, her eyes clinging to Mr. Markham's, trying desperately not to see Tom's startled, accusing face just behind Mr. Markham.

"Well—you see, I—I'm in love with a married man," said Betsy shakily. "That's why I ran away down here. And after the firm I worked for here moved to Miami, and when my money gave out and I couldn't find another job, I was going to commit suicide—only Tom came along and stopped me."

"So you are in love with a married man!" said Mr. Markham. His voice was level, almost expressionless. "ARE—or WERE?"

"I'm still in love with him," said Betsy, setting her teeth hard above the little sob that tried to clutch her throat. "I'll always be crazy about him, I guess. He's a pretty wonderful person."

"And is he in love with you?" asked Mr. Markham gently.

Betsy's eyes widened enormously and she gasped. "Oh, goodness—no! Why, he doesn't know I'm on earth. He adores his wife; she's beautiful and good and—well, everybody thinks she's wonderful. I do, too. That's why I felt so terrible when I knew I was in love with him."

"Then he doesn't know that you're in love with him?" asked Mr. Markham, while Tom merely sat silent and listened.

"Oh, goodness, no!" gasped Betsy, as though shocked at the bare idea. "He'd just about have a fit if he thought—why, I was just a stenographer in his office. I suppose most of the girls work there."

are pretty crazy about him, but I KNEW I loved him. There wasn't anything for me to do but run away before I made a fool of myself."

Mr. Markham nodded gravely. "But you DID run away!" he pointed out.

"Of course. What else could I do?"

Mr. Markham looked up at Tom and smiled faintly.

"I think she's the girl for the job," he said, smiling a little. "She's a square shooter, obviously, or she'd have stayed around the office and tried to vamp the boss—don't you think?"

Tom nodded. "I knew she was a square shooter before I'd talked to her half an hour," he said gravely.

Betsy was scarlet now, her eyes radiant as she looked from one to the other of the two men.

"You—you mean I can stay? That I can have the job?" she stammered, faint with new hope.

"You honestly in telling us something that you might quite easily have kept as a secret—something we really have no right to know, my dear, is sufficient proof to me that you can be trusted," said Mr. Markham quietly. "If Tom feels as I do—"

Tom was studying her curiously and, as though ignoring the question in Mr. Markham's voice, he asked Betsy, "Why did you tell us this?"

Betsy's eyes fell. "So that neither you nor Mr. Markham would believe that—that well, that you and I might be one of the honeymoon couples," she confessed almost humbly. "I didn't want you to think there was any danger of my falling in love with you—"

"Or of my falling in love with you?" Tom finished for her, looking a trifle resentful. "Well, you needn't be afraid, my lady. I can assure you there's not the slightest danger of my falling in love with you. In the first place, you're not my type."

She flushed a little beneath the sting in his voice and Mr. Markham brushed his hand across his lips as though to conceal a faint smile. And then he said briskly, "Well, now that we seem agreed that you are to be caretakers at Halcyon Island, shall we say good night? Meanwhile, you are to stay here, as my guests—that is, of course, if you do not object? I can't get around very well and we will be constantly consulting, conferring. It will make things much more simple if you will just be my guests until the island quarters are ready."

Betsy said quietly, "Because, of course, you know we are homeless and penniless and we haven't any place to go—"

"My dear, I hope you will neither of you ever be friendless while I live, or homeless. We are going to have a lot of fun, we three, and it makes me very happy indeed to have you here with me. Burton will show you to your rooms and we will continue this discussion in the morning. My doctor insists, you see, that I keep rather early hours."

Burton appeared at the door, although neither Betsy nor Tom had seen Mr. Markham give any signal to call him. But there he was, correctly expressionless, watchful.

"Burton, Miss Carter and Mr. Forman are going to be my guests for a few weeks. Will you see that they are shown in the rooms prepared for them?"

Burton bowed.

Betsy and Tom said good night to Mr. Markham and followed Burton up the stairs. At the first door on the left of the stairs, where Betsy had changed her wet garments earlier in the evening, Burton paused, opened the door and said politely, "This is the room prepared for you, Miss Carter. If there is anything you need, just ring."

He turned to Tom and said politely, "You're a little farther down this way, sir."

Tom lingered to look down at Betsy, his face grave, almost stern. "I don't know why you thought it necessary to stage that little confessional scene downstairs. But you needn't have bothered warning me. I thought I told you at the hamburger stand that this was strictly a business arrangement."

"You did," said Betsy swiftly. "But he's so wonderful. I couldn't bear to deceive him—about us. And—well, I thought you should have the right to decide whether you wanted to—to work with me or not."

Tom looked at Betsy hard for a moment, his eyes angry and puzzled. Then he turned on his heel and walked away to where Burton was waiting.

Betsy went in and closed the door of her room behind her. The whole evening had been so amazing, so utterly incredible, that she had the feeling of being a sort of "Alice in Wonderland." Would she wake up and find it all a dream? Find herself huddled on the beach, trying to make up her mind to walk out into those turquoise, white-laced waters and end all the troubled, unhappy business of living? She shivered a little and put her hands against her hot cheeks.

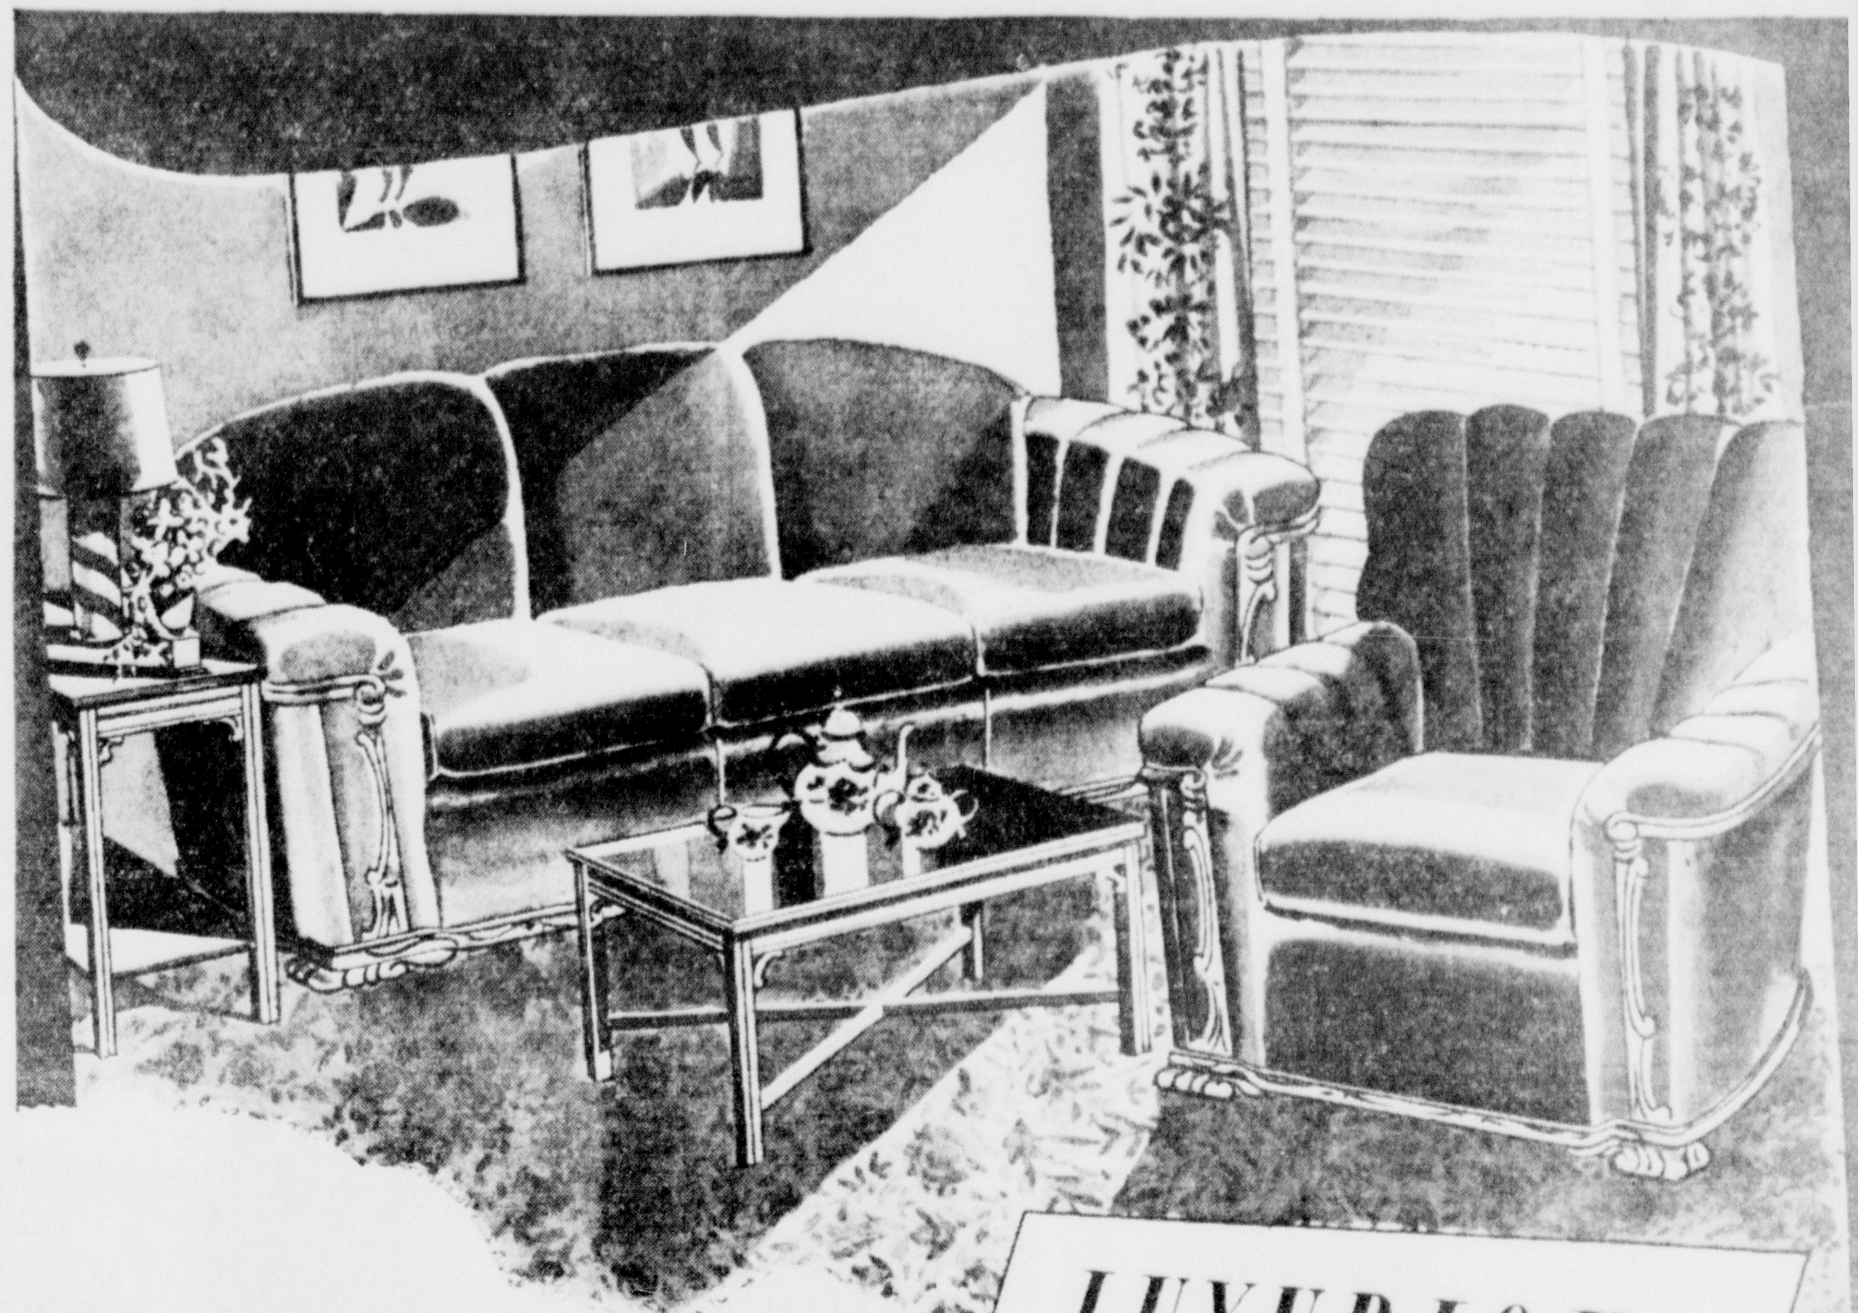

And as always when she was tired or troubled or worried, she seemed to see Dirk Maynard's dark, handsome face, his smile a flash of white teeth, his dark eyes almost caressing—even though when he looked at you like that, you knew he wasn't really seeing you; he was thinking of that exquisite creature who was his wife; the lovely, fragile, blue-eyed blonde who sometimes trailed her expensive furs and her exotic perfume through the outer office on the way to Dirk's private sanctum.

Betsy sighed, and a wild clutch of pain and loneliness held her in its grip. She was hungry for the sight of Dirk, for the sound of his voice, for just the look of him as he came swinging through the office with that air of a conquering hero home from the wars, which was an integral part of his audacious charm.

And she was a little ashamed of herself that when she had got herself out of the lovely velvet gown and into the fresh, dainty night-dress she found spread out for her on the bed, she crept into bed and cried herself to sleep; because she was so lonely for the dear, familiar, dangerous warmth of Dirk Maynard's presence.

BROADWAY'S ANSWER TO HOLLYWOOD

What's One Stolen Bike To a Super-Salesman?

COLUMBUS, O. (AP)—Super-salesman David Posey, 15, won a bicycle three years ago for selling tickets to a Boy Scout program. The bike was stolen four months later.

The next year he won another; it has been stolen and recovered eight times. When he rode home from the police station the last time he fell, injuring a knee cap, which called for an operation.

Super-salesman David, undaunted, has the groundwork laid for this year's ticket sale.

P.S. He took last year's award, too, but in cash instead of an offered trip.

Following disclosure that the Will Hays office in Hollywood is working up an official frown for all pictures of actresses in snug, curve-hugging sweaters, Hazel Brooks, a Walter Thornton model, in New York, poses for this picture to prove all's well on Broadway. Now, Mr. Hays, do your worst.

Fishing Season Opening Termed 'Disappointment'

Sportsmen's Association Head Criticizes Methods of Stocking

FROSTBURG, April 3—Former Mayor Frederick Crowe, president of the Allegany-Garrett County Sportsmen's Association, and Paul Carpenter, a member of the executive committee of the association, stated today that local fishermen had a disappointing experience Tuesday, the opening day of the trout season.

Mr. Carpenter, who spent the day along the banks of Bear creek in Garrett county, reported that more than 300 fishermen were on the creek Tuesday, and the largest catch was three trout, with at least 80 percent failing to catch anything.

Mr. Carpenter said he was informed that only 200 trout were placed in Bear creek from the bridge to Friendsville to supply fishing for more than 200 fishermen. He also charges that trout were placed in streams that will be dry in three weeks. Mr. Carpenter said he phoned to officers of the Outdoor Life Association and complained about the method of stocking streams.

Mr. Crowe insists that local fishermen should know exactly what streams have been stocked.

Both men declared that the opening of the trout season this week was a great disappointment, from the standpoint of the number of fish caught, to sportlovers of this section.

Mrs. Byron 'Greatly Encouraged' By Reception in Garrett County

Widow of Congressman Non-Strikers' Homes Stoned at Martinsburg

OAKLAND, April 3—Leaving Garrett county tonight to continue her campaign for the congressional seat of her late husband, Mrs. W. D. Byron said she was "greatly encouraged" by her conference with Democratic committeemen and other party leaders here.

Mrs. Byron, whose husband was killed recently in a plane crash near Atlanta, Ga., met with four county committeemen in the afternoon, and then talked with other party workers, including Attorney William R. Offutt.

Grover C. Stemple, chairman, said the committee made no outright promises of support, but that it was apparent that her candidacy was being warmly received in the county. Other committeemen with whom Mrs. Byron conferred were W. E. Spoerlein, W. R. Browning and A. T. Matthews.

Mrs. Byron said her husband had believed in the future of Garrett county as a summer and winter playground area, and that she also was deeply interested in the county. She thanked party leaders for the support her husband received here last fall.

The candidate reiterated her reasons for seeking the nomination. She said that because she knew her husband's program, she wanted to carry it to completion, and would not seek another term in Congress.

On leaving Oakland, she planned to stop in Grantsville to confer with another committee member, Hayward Broadwater, before going to Frederick county. Accompanying her was Mrs. Thomas Harding of Hagerstown.

'Showdown' in Chemical Industry Organization Drive Is Forecast

CIO Moves To Organize Vital Defense Plants in Kanawha Valley Senate Seat Fight Decision Delayed

WASHINGTON, April 3 (AP)—Senator Kilgore (D-W.Va.) declared today that action by the Senate Elections committee on the West Virginia Senate seat contest had been delayed by absence from Washington of some members of the committee.

Kilgore, a member of the committee, said agreement had been reached when the committee last met to grant the request of Senator Chandler (D-Ky.) to defer action until Chandler's return from a trip to the West Coast.

Chandler, in questions he asked during hearings on conflicting claims of Clarence Martin and Joseph Rosier for the seat, supported Martin's nomination by former Governor Homer A. Holt, of West Virginia. Rosier was nominated by Governor M. M. Neely to complete the Senate term relinquished by Neely to become governor.

George J. Titler, international representative of District 50 (Chemical division) of the United Mine Workers, announced that General Superintendent W. W. Jennings agreed to hold a meeting in the presence of a Labor board representative.

Electro-Metallurgical, a subsidiary of Union Carbide, operates plants at Alloy and Glen Ferris in Fayette county. It manufactures ferro-manganese, a vital product in steel-making. The plants have been running at virtual capacity since the nation's defense program got under way.

Titler said the meeting, to cover discussions involving the Alloy and Glen Ferris workers, would take place Saturday morning in Cincinnati, O. before Philip G. Phillips, NLRB regional director.

Titler said the union would be represented by him, James Gallagher, another international representative, and a committee of three employee representatives from Alloy.

Jennings was away from the plant today and unavailable for comment.

The company has been asked by the CIO union to sign a closed shop contract. Titler said, adding that 1,000 of the 1,300 workers are union members.

The union official, executive director of the Kanawha Valley Chemical Workers Council (CWO), declared a half-dozen chemical plants, including the du Pont ammonia plant at Belle employing 4,000 workers, are in a stage of organization to talk contract terms.

The valley's chemical plants, most of which have sprung up since the World War, are all engaged at present in manufacturing numerous products important to defense.

Study of W. Va. Industry Urged For Possible Defense Production

WASHINGTON, April 3 (AP)—A study of West Virginia's industry to determine the extent to which existing plants could participate in defense production was started today by Senator Kilgore (D-W.Va.).

He said the information would be used to support his bill (SJR35) to provide for decentralization of defense work, spreading the program into small shops.

He wrote officials of chambers of commerce in a dozen principal cities of the state asking prompt aid in supplying data on the number of machine shops and kindred plants available, how much production could be increased and the supply of labor available.

The survey, he said, would be carried on by the Work Projects Administration, which at his request agreed to send S. C. Menefer of its Research division into the state within a few days to personally visit industrial areas and obtain information from additional plants.

In the interest of speeding the national defense program by use of all existing manufacturing plants where possible and spreading em-

'Empties' Moved, Crews Cut Off, Carriers Report

Quiet Marks Third Day of Stoppage in West Virginia Coal Fields

CHARLESTON, W. Va., April 3 (AP)—Railroads whose West Virginia lines carry millions of tons of coal every year began to feel the pinch of the bituminous shutdown in earnest today as call boards showed fewer and fewer crews out.

In both Northern and Southern districts the carriers had about completed the work of moving "empties" to the idle mines in readiness for reopening on some indefinite date.

Some trains were still picking up cars loaded before the Appalachian wage contract expired April 1, but most of that tonnage will be moved shortly.

The Chesapeake and Ohio, Baltimore and Ohio, Norfolk and Western, Virginian, New York Central and other coal carriers disclosed that crews had been cut off temporarily or would be very soon unless the deadlocked union-operator conference in New York finds a wage solution quickly.

The nation's biggest bituminous-producing state went through the third day of work stoppage in absolute quiet. Pickets still stood around the big non-union operation of the Elk River Coal and Lumber Company at Widen, Clay county, but officials reported no disturbances.

Shots were reported fired around the mine last night but no one was hurt. Principal Lloyd H. Elliott of the Widen school announced it would be closed "until the threat of violence is passed" because parents would not send their children to classes.

Superintendent H. B. Davies said United Mine Workers pickets appeared in "shifts" throughout the day and the mine would not reopen until the men left permanently.

As an indication of how the mines of the nation worked in the last week before the shutdown, the National Coal association estimated production for the week ended March 29 at 11,600,000 tons.

This represented 98.3 per cent of the mine capacity of the country, and coal sources in Charleston declared it an almost unbelievable production rate.

was ordered early last December and the smaller of the two present trucks was applied on the purchase, with a balance of $5,800 to be paid by the fire company.

The new truck has a 500-gallon pumper, the same as the old truck, but in addition has a 200-gallon booster tank, compared to the 100-gallon tank in the truck being exchanged.

One of the features of the new truck is the enclosed cab which holds five men. This is calculated to prevent the many frozen ears, hands, etc., that have been the lot of firemen upon many occasions while going to a fire in sub-zero weather. The pumper can also be operated from inside the cab.

Other standard equipment such as axes, ladders, spotlights, siren, etc., are on the truck and it also carries 200 feet of hose for the booster tank attached to a reel. There will also be space for the 1200 feet of two-inch hose already owned by the department.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

DON'T LET IT DOWN YOU
YOU HAVE to get used to discouraging developments if you play bridge. Sometimes correct bidding or play will get you a worse score than incorrect play, as the hidden factor of luck is always operating one way or another. Duplicate players in particular will find that occasional hands give a better score to somebody who furnishes unsound tactics, whereas yours may have been infinitely superior.

Bidding about like that occurred at most tables of a duplicate game. All of the declarers made their contracts, plus either one or two overtricks. It was peculiar that in every case the weaker players got the two overtricks and the stronger ones got only one overtrick each.

In each case the club J was led South winning it with his A, then leading the spade 3 to the K, which dropped the J. Right then came the difference. The weaker players next led the spade 10 from the dummy and, when East failed to cover, finessed it successfully. They followed with the A, dropping the Q, and then ran diamonds, discarding two clubs and a heart and leading toward the heart K. Thus they lost only one trick, to the heart A.

The better players figured that this method risked the possibility of overtricks. If the trump finesse failed, the defenders could peel off one trick each in hearts and clubs, holding the declarer to four-odd. But they saw a sure method to make one overtrick, and a good chance, at least as good as the other way, to make two. That was by playing the A on the second round of trumps, seeking a drop of the Q. When this failed, they ran three diamonds, discarding one club, then led another from dummy. East ruffed with the Q and South discarded his last club. The heart A then remained as the only winner the defenders still had in sight.

Small European States Doomed, Educator Says

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., April 2 (AP)—The current war means death to the small European states, in the opinion of Dr. Thomas Ennis, associate professor of history at West Virginia university and a former newspaperman.

"I can no more foresee all results of the war than can anyone else," he said, "but I will say that it means the absolute end of the small states of Europe."

"This, in reality, is the third World War," he continued. "The War of 1812 was certainly the first, in that it affected every European country as well as the United States and had far reaching effects in every other part of the globe."

Dr. Ennis served in the British army in what is commonly known today as the first World war and later was a news agency representative in the Far East.

When the present war ends, he said, the entire world must be "internationalized" if civilization is to survive and people are to live on amicable terms.

She Looks Sweet, She Sings Sweet But Is She Another Deanna Durbin?

Kathryn Grayson

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—Even with a sweet voice, it takes time for a youngster to become an overnight sensation, and Kathryn Grayson, latest entry in the movie singing lists, is no exception to the rule that has held for her quartet of rivals.

Miss Grayson, recently turned 19, joined a field of teen-age coloraturas that includes Deanna Durbin, Gloria Jean, Susanna Foster and Edith Fellows. The new singing actress, after a year and a half under contract and "under wraps," makes a pleasant debut in the new Hardy film, "Andy Hardy's Private Secretary."

Her Ambition—Opera
She's a shy miss, still a little terrified by pictures, and still clinging to her early ambition for grand opera. She hasn't seen her first picture yet—only parts of it—and is trying, she says, to work up courage to see it all.

It takes no audience courage to see and hear Kathryn, however.

She has a pert freshness and youthful prettiness further enhanced by the effortless ease with which she sails through arias or popular songs.

Kathryn (real name Zelma Hedrick of Winston-Salem, N. C.) came to Los Angeles from St. Louis when her father, a real estate man and building contractor, came here to set up business with a former partner. She was continuing her voice lessons, when her talents were brought to studio attention and she was persuaded to sign a contract.

"I had thought pictures would mean stopping my studies," she says, "but they assured me I could go on. And I've found I study harder at the studio than I did before."

For a year and a half, Kathryn has had a regular schedule of study under chosen tutors—a full eight-hour day which keeps her watching the minutes between classes.

She was cast for her first film only when studio bosses deemed her ready. Kathryn herself wasn't so much experience. But Mickey

"I had flu all during the picture," she says, "and I didn't want to die off in such fast company. I'd hear that Mickey Rooney was a scoundrel, and then there were all the others, such grand actors, with a sure, a darling—he helped me so much."

Stocks Have Best Rally of Year; Rails and Industrials Up Sharply

"Inflationary Thinking" Is Given as Reason for Activity

By FRERICK GARDNER

New York, April 3 (AP)—Stocks broke out of the doldrums in today's market with the speediest rally of the year in which rails and industrials ran up gains of 1 to more than 2 points. A number of favorites posted new 1941 highs.

Brokers attributed the break-up, coming mainly to the revival of "inflationary thinking," which served partially to obscure fears of an imminent Nazi thrust at Yugoslavia and the money disturbing labor strife in home. In addition, it was reasoned the government's action in ordering a ceiling on iron and steel scrap and soft coal indicated the idea of raising prices was coming to the fore.

The Associated Press average of sixty issues was ahead 6 of a point at 42.3, the best day's advance since March 10 when a gain of as much was recorded.

The day's turnover of 940,560 shares was the largest since Dec. 31.

First World War Came Out of Sarajevo: Now the Second World War Comes to It

AP Feature Service

On June 28, 1914, in the drowsy Balkan city of Sarajevo, then in Austria-Hungary, a 19-year-old boy, Gavrilo Princip, shot to death Archduke Franz Ferdinand, heir to the Austro-Hungarian throne. Austria-Hungary accused Serbia of tolerating terrorist activities directed at the empire, sent an ultimatum, refused to mediate. On July 28, 1914, Austrian troops were bombarding Belgrade, the Serbian capital. World War I was on.

On Sept. 1, 1939, Danzig and the Polish corridor set off World War II. Sarajevo, in the new state of Yugoslavia, was a long way away.

Three New Irishmen

FORT BRADY, Mich.—Sergeant Frazier of the Medical Corps, who is no linguist, has rechristened three of his assistants as follows: Kurzinski to "Casey," Wojcikowski to "Murphy" and Mientkowski to "Kelly."

As World War II went on, the Balkans, always dangerous to a European nation at war, became the objective of a German diplomatic drive to the east. One by one, Yugoslavia's neighbors became Axis partners or satellites. Italy, Austria, Hungary, Rumania, Bulgaria, Albania—all were members of the Axis or occupied by German troops. Only Greece to the south of Yugoslavia was in opposition.

Osensibly to get a route through which to attack Greece, the Germans brought pressure into the Yugoslav government. Prince Paul's government signed with Hitler—the Yugoslavs were to permit shipments

Easy for Bugler

CAMP BOWIE, Tex.—The job of bugling the boys of the Thirty-sixth division out of bed is, more or less a pipe. The young man with the horn simply reaches under his cot, turns off the alarm, leans back on his pillow and blows the notes softly in a bedside microphone. Four large amplifiers placed about the post do the rest.

Love Knows No Obstacle

ATHENS, Tenn (AP)—Alves Estes, when he is not preaching the Gospel, operates a Turkish bath. Recently an unattended couple appeared for the marriage ceremony. The only witness available was a man in a steam booth. He wouldn't interrupt his steaming and the couple wouldn't wait. Solution—the ceremony was performed amid clouds of steam. Science Moves Ahead in Grim Fight Against Dread Infantile Paralysis

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
We are always reminded by the President's Birthday ball and his visits to Georgia of the ever present dread of infantile paralysis. The incidence of occurrence of infantile paralysis has not changed at all in the last twenty-five years because we do not know any practical methods of prevention.

Undoubtedly infantile paralysis is spread from individual to individual in a number of ways. It is not a very frequent disease and when an epidemic does occur, it is probably spread largely by direct contact or cough droplets or in the breath or in the air of a badly ventilated room.

Investigation Started

One definite method of spread seems to have been discovered, which is that epidemics have been proved to occur from water contaminated with sewage. It is well known to those who study epidemics that infantile paralysis tends to occur in neighborhoods.

For instance, a case which started a line of investigation occurred in Connecticut in the summer of 1939. Attention was first called to this when a girl 18 years old was admitted to the New Haven hospital with a severe paralytic form of the disease. She was the first patient with the disease to be reported from that part of the state for over a year. Another patient with recent acute paralysis was soon discovered in the same community, and presently cases occurred in many members of the six related families who lived close by.

Not so long afterward, fourteen cases were reported from the western part of Connecticut. The location of cases bore a very definite relationship to the banks of a stream or river which drains off sewage and industrial waste from the entire region.

Epidemics Not Rare

Epidemics of this kind are by no means rare, and have been reported in Sweden, Germany and Rumania; also in various parts of the United States.

The virus of infantile paralysis can be isolated from the sewage water. It cannot be isolated from ordinary running water unless the water has been polluted by sewage.

I reported some of the preliminary work along this line a little over a year ago. Last year the American Medical Association gave a prize to the men who had done the research work, which would indicate that it is considered to be very authentic and valuable and may be the beginning of our knowledge of the prevention of this dread disease.

Questions and Answers
Q. W.: "Is there any special diet for one who has a stone or gravel in the bladder?"

Answer—Many diets have been tried for this condition, but none has been successful in preventing the formation of a stone or its growth after it has once started to form.

R. M.: "Is the frequent use of paregoric to induce longer naps injurious to a child of two years?"

Answer—Decidedly yes. Paregoric is a specially prepared tincture of opium and its use is likely to induce the opium habit. A child of two years certainly does not need anything to induce longer naps unless there is something very much the matter with it, in which case paregoric simply masks the real symptoms.

L. M. C.: "What are cysts? How do they form and what from? Do they ever form on the lips?"

Answer—A cyst is an encapsulated collection of fluid. The simplest form of cyst is a retention cyst in which the duct of a gland becomes closed and the secretions are dammed behind it. An example of this is what is commonly called a "wen" or sebaceous cyst of the skin. Cysts, however, can form in any part of the body due to the overgrowth of cells, which form the cyst wall.

P. M.: "What is the best and most effective remedy for iron deficiency in your blood?"

Answer—Iron itself can be obtained in many forms of pills and is the best way of supplying the deficiency.

Billy Conn Will Meet Barlund in Chicago Tonight

Pittsburgh Boxer Expects To Win on Speed and Superior Skill

By CHARLES DUNKLEY
CHICAGO, April 3 (AP)—Billy Conn, handsome young boxing master from Pittsburgh, engages in his last ring assignment tomorrow night before his golden opportunity against Joe Louis in June.

The 23-year-old Irishman will face the seasoned Gunnar Barlund, formerly of Finland, biggest and perhaps the most dangerous heavyweight he has yet to meet, in a 12-round battle in the Chicago Stadium. Because of Conn's popularity, the bout may draw in excess of 60,000 spectators and a gate of $37,000.

Conn is exceptionally sharp and full of fire after two weeks' training. With his speed and superior boxing skill, the ambitious Pittsburgher is convinced he will be able to outbox his heavier and slower moving opponent. Conn expects to scale between 176 and 178 pounds, which will give Barlund a weight bulge of close to twenty pounds. Barlund figures to weigh 196 to 197.

Barlund, hoping for a jackpot of thousands of dollars if he can score an upset, believes he has worked himself into the best of condition and will wear down Conn's boxing skill by forcing the fight and out-roughing his lighter foe.

The big Finn scored a technical knockout over Buddy Baer in 1938 at a time when the younger Baer was being groomed as a possible foe for Louis. A year later Barlund stopped the winning streak of Chicago's Tony Musto, who had rolled up twenty-five straight victories.

False Alarms Keep Area Forest Wardens Busy

Six woods fires and seventy-five false alarms kept district forest wardens busy in Allegany county yesterday.

According to District Warden Erner Wigfield, the fires ranged from Stony Run to Bedford road and were successfully combated in every case. In all, thirty acres were covered by fire yesterday in the county.

False alarms kept the forest wardens busier than the fires. At one time yesterday, smoke clouds could be seen rising in every direction from one fire tower in the county.

Investigations revealed persons recklessly burning brush or rubbish.

Workmen Will Clear Sight for Airport

Ralph L. Rizer, city engineer, yesterday said that the work of clearing the site for the Cumberland airport near Wiley Ford, W. Va., will start next week.

A saw mill will be installed and lumber cut up and stored for later use in the project. Rizer stated that he believes that the lumber can be used to construct fences.

WPA labor will be used on the project.

U. S. Demands

Eight Italian vessels taken into protective custody last week-end was quoted as having told officials that he received orders from the Italian attaché here to damage his engines. There has been no official intimation, however, of evidence linking any German government official with sabotage.

A German sea captain and nine seamen refused to enter any plea when taken into federal court in Boston today on indictments charging them with sabotage aboard the Pauline Friedrich, one of the two Nazi vessels seized along with the twenty-eight Italian and thirty-nine Danish merchantmen.

Although the ships merely taken into "protective custody" to prevent further sabotage, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau said that he and Attorney General Robert H. Jackson were studying possible action to forfeit them to the United States.

May Seize Ships
The 1917 espionage act under which the ships were seized provides that the government may ask that they be forfeited as penalty for sabotage.

The not demanding the recall of Admiral Luis was sent in a letter of American replies to the protests lodged by the German and Italian embassies over the seizure of the ships and crews.

When the replies would be delivered still was not known but it was certain that they would reject the Axis protests completely.

Admiral Luis, married to an American-born woman, was expected to leave promptly but the Italian embassy said it was awaiting instructions from Rome. He has been naval attaché here since February, 1940, and was attached to the embassy here once before from 1926 to 1929.

The American note, in accordance with diplomatic custom in such cases, did not specify exactly the grounds for asking his recall. It said that "various facts and circumstances have come to the attention of the government of the United States connecting" Admiral Luis with persons of acts in violation of the laws of the United States.

Bowling Green Citizens Protest Speed on McMullen Highway

Citizens in the Bowling Green area have written to Governor Herbert O'Connor protesting against the speed and carelessness of automobile drivers on McMullen highway in that section.

The letter points out that residents fear for the lives of children and other pedestrians in the Bowling Green section and pointed out that last week a 12-year-old boy was struck and killed by a hit and run driver at Bowling Green.

In addition to protesting against speed and general carelessness, residents declare many drivers fail to make the proper stops for school buses.

Maryland Coaches Are Pleased with Football Squad

Number of Rookies Impress Faber, Heagy and Woods in Early Drills

COLLEGE PARK, Md., April 3 (AP)—General satisfaction with spring football practice, and particularly with the work of a number of rookies, was expressed today by University of Maryland coaches Jack Faber, Al Heagy and Al Woods.

Three shifts of importance were made during the spring drills which ended Saturday, and all of them appear to be permanent.

Short of good line material, the coaching staff sent three backs into the forward wall.

Don Shockey, a 205-pounder, went to tackle; Harold Berry to guard; and Don Gilmore to end. Luther Conrad, normally a guard who played at right end last season, was returned to his old stand.

Gilmore and four sophomores will have to fill the wing posts next fall, but George Simler, Bob James, Ken Daniels and Lou Hesson present promising talent. All stand more than six feet tall and have the required weight.

Sophomores also are destined to fill key spots in the backfield, with Jack Wright, a fleet 205-pounder, Tom Mont, John Brenner, and George Barnes the outstanding candidates.

Trained with lettermen Elmer Rigby, Meazle DuVall, Bernie Ullman, John Cordyack and Joe Hoopengardner provide unusual offensive assets.

Veterans are on hand for the berths between the ends, although development of additional strength at the tackles is considered essential.

wobbled a bit in spots, and the tone was not always quite so sure.

Strings are what give an orchestra character. A conductor makes of them what he will; some string sections play with a cold, hard beauty, others sing like poetry. But invariably they reflect the musical mind of the conductor. Last night there was an indication that if Holtz continues his work with his orchestra he will one day mould a string section that will sing. And when he achieves what he is trying to do Cumberland is going to have a mighty fine orchestra.

Full Orchestra Needed
The first two groups yesterday evening clearly demonstrated one thing, namely, that if you are going to play "man-size" orchestra music you have to have a "man-size" orchestra.

The Unfinished Symphony played last night by the alumni group lacked punch. It didn't rise and swell with the brilliance Schubert music should. It seemed that the orchestra, and this was particularly true of the string section, was playing too cautiously. Strange enough, this caution noted in the first portion of the program all but disappeared in the last group when the attack of the fiddles was more sure and buoyant. All in all, it was something like a sponge cake that didn't quite make the grade.

Friedman's Slavonic Rhapsody was well done and the Strauss number was enjoyable.

Great Improvement
The last group, as has already been stated, gave the audience a vision of what will eventually be done when Holtz gets through with those musicians.

It would not be true to say that Cumberland has a good orchestra at the moment. It would be true to say that it has an orchestra that gives promise of great things. That was the reason, the reporter thinks, that the audience got unusually enthusiastic last night. It saw something fine in the making.

The orchestra members, engaged in all sorts of professions, play of course, because they enjoy it. However, it is very evident to one who has heard the group play the last United States connecting. Admirals Luis with persons of acts in violation of the laws of the United States.

a force right nearby. He cited the intervention of federal troops in the 1894 Pullman strike over the protests of Eugene V. Debs and Governor Altgeld of Illinois, as an example of possible forceful action. Then he went on to quote a jingle written at that time by Henry Waterson, editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal:

"Now don't you try it Mr. Debs, 'Don't tackle Uncle Sam,' 'Ten thousand Johnny Rebs,' 'Can't tell you that project, Debs,' 'Ain't worth a tinker's dam.'"

Home Guards Needed
Stimson also asserted that the appeal for federal aid in the Allis-Chalmers strike, made by Julius P. Heil of Wisconsin, underscored a need for immediate formation of home guards in the states to take the place of national guardsmen in federal service.

The Allis-Chalmers plant, which makes machinery used in the defense program, has been the scene of a strike for ten weeks. A union shop and wage adjustments are among the demands made by the CIO United Automobile Workers.

Declaring that the Mediation Board was "starting fresh" on the case, C. A. DeKstra, board chairman, said he and his colleagues felt "free to act in any way" they thought would best meet a given situation. He appointed a five-member panel to deal with the case.

Americans

this strategy was adopted in order to gain popular support for defense measures, including taxes.

Concerning United States aid to Britain, the speaker also doubted that this policy was based primarily on physical defense of America — the idea that if Britain falls, America will be at the mercy of the Nazis.

America is giving aid to Britain and her allies, he said, "because we don't want to see the democratic way of life in England or on the continent" crushed by the Nazi juggernaut. The economic angle is also to be considered, he went on, with the United States disliking the idea of doing business, if any, in a Nazi-controlled world.

Turning to America's spiritual condition in the face of this crisis, the minister was not too optimistic.

Stresses Idea of Service
"We have departed from our early Americanism," he said, particularly with regard to "a sturdy, lasting, intense faith in the power of God."

Clark told the Kiwanians Americans have strayed far from "the firm belief that the workman should make himself worthy of his hire."

Today, he said, Americans concentrate their efforts on getting more money instead of giving more service. Declaring that financial return should be based on service, he urged that more emphasis be placed on this philosophy, with employer taking care that service is properly rewarded.

Another development viewed as unhealthy by the speaker is the waste of the leisure time created by the progress of the machine age. "We've saved a lot of time, but have done little or nothing with it," he said. "Speed has given us time to waste."

The gradual breakdown in respect for authority Clark saw as the seed of potential revolution.

Disrespect for Authority
From dishonesty in such trivial things as attempting to park overtime on a parking meter, America has built up a disrespect of constituted authority and law which may one day prove serious unless checked, he asserted.

Disrespect for authority in the temporal field has carried over, too, into the religious field, the clergyman stated. With increasing disrespect for church authority, our nation has become known throughout the world for "loose living," he added.

Even Germany sneers at the United States, the Kiwanians heard, believing that it has fallen into "spiritual disintegration and deterioration."

Incidentally, Clark, while disclaiming emphatically any sympathy with German Nazism, pointed out that in Germany, with its "old stream of culture," there lies the "seed of something wonderful."

Coming back to the flaws in America's spiritual armor, the minister deplored the loss of our ability to differentiate between liberty and license. He pointed out that true freedom is "regulated and controlled so that all have equal liberty and opportunity."

Four New Members Received
In conclusion, the speaker called for a return to such fundamental American principles as government of the people, liberty under law, service, worship of God and appreciation of the finer things of life.

The meeting was also marked by the induction of four new members: Leslie B. Gordon, William Edward Landefeld, O. J. Hale and John J. Robinson. The group was welcomed by Fred Dodge, chairman of the Kiwanis Education committee.

Visitors included William S. Ratchford, superintendent of the Maryland Workshop for the Blind, Lemont Hackett, field officer and home service department head for the Workshop, and the Rev. J. B. Trotter, all of Baltimore; and Charles M. See, Cumberland, chairman of the Allegany county delegation in the House of Delegates. The Rev. H. Hall Sharp, chairman of the committee on Support of the Churches in Their Spiritual Aims, introduced Clark.

Local Kiwanians Are Host to Group from Hagerstown Club

The bowling league of the Cumberland Kiwanis club was a combination last night of a poor host and a good host.

First, the Cumberlanders defeated the Kiwanis bowling team of Hagerstown by 217 pins in a match at the Club alleys. That was bad for the visitors.

But then, to make it up, the Cumberland group took its guests out to the Ali Ghan Shrine Country Club, where a buffet supper was served.

Weldon W. Skiles was chairman in charge of arrangements. About forty attended.

Elsie Heipp Invites Local Groups To Visit Meadow Mountain Camp

Local civic groups, county officials and representatives of social agencies yesterday received invitations from Miss Elsie Heipp, executive secretary of the Allegany County Welfare Board, to visit the Meadow Mountain CCC Camp in Garrett county this month in connection with the eighth anniversary of the founding of the Civilian Conservation Corps.

The anniversary is being celebrated by all of the camps from March 26 to April 17, and Miss Heipp hopes to have a large representation of local groups present to tour the camp on a date to be announced later.

It's deep-rooted and ever-present and universal...this craving for the news. We give it direct expression every time we greet a friend with "What's new?" We let it have full reign when we reach for the daily newspaper.

What's new? What did the school board decide last night? Did Mrs. Taylor get her divorce? How was the concert? What's going on in Washington? London? Berlin? Moscow? Tokyo? Rome? Who was elected president of the Ladies' Auxiliary? What did the raiding bombers do today? Did copper go up or down? Who won the game?

What's new?...in politics, business, foreign affairs...in society, sports, fashions...in music, art and the theatre? We want to know...because we are curious by nature, because we like to be well-informed...and because we realize that each day's events may affect our welfare and our happiness.

Only in newspapers can we satisfy this constant hunger for the news. Only in newspapers can we get a quick, complete and accurate account of happenings at home and abroad.

And today, when the news is so vitally important to all of us, we read the newspaper more eagerly, more thoroughly than ever before. That's why the newspaper, which has always been a profitable medium for advertisers, is a more profitable medium today than ever before.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

A Valentine Query

Dear Miss Fairfax:
I sent my boy friend, who seems to be losing interest in me, a valentine. While I did not write my name, he knows my handwriting well enough to know who sent it. So far, he hasn't said a word of acknowledgment and he goes about with another girl. Shall I ask him if he got the valentine?
BEWILDERED

To my way of thinking, it would be a mistake to ask a young man who is apparently cooling off in his interest in you if he received the valentine, particularly, as you say, he is familiar with your handwriting. Don't show any resentment about the new girl friend.

The best plan for a reconciliation is not to show one's feelings. Men hate accusations or countercharges.

Mother Picks Suitor

Dear Miss Fairfax:
I am 16 years old and keeping company with a young man of 23. He has no bad habits, a fair job and has enough saved to build a home and buy furniture and a car. He takes me to the best places, but I do not love him. My mother insists I keep on going with him, and says I should tell him I love him. She thinks he will help my father start a new business.

I love another boy who is still in high school, lives in the same town, and I see him often. He is ambitious and wants to become a doctor.

My mother thinks money is more important in marriage than education, and this 23-year-old boy doesn't have much education. He has proposed to me and can give me everything. But I don't think it's fair to him, as I don't love him. My mother says she'll take your advice. Please answer, I need your help to much.
KATE

You're absolutely right, whether your mother agrees with me or not, that it would be the greatest mistake to marry a man you don't love, especially as you're only 16 years of age.

When your mother says she thinks this young man will set your father up in business, that is hardly fair to you, and I hope you'll be able to hold out against family pressure to force you into an marriage for advantages to your family. I hope before you marry anybody you will at least finish high school.

Salary Too Small

Dear Miss Fairfax:
Will you please try to help me with some of your advice? I've been reading your column for years, and the thing I like about it is that you're not a sob-sister or a tear-jerker. Here's my story:

My wife, the mother of my six children, was found dead in our kitchen, overcome by gas poisoning. I feel confident it was a case of suicide, though the coroner gave a verdict of accidental death. She was going to have a baby at the time. With our six children and ourselves all trying to make out on a salary of $20 a week, she could not face the future.

This happened over a year ago, and a friend of my wife's, who has been coming in to care for the children, is willing to marry me. In fact, she has suggested it. She is a splendid woman, 39 years of age. But in view of what has happened, I hesitate to accept this offer from her, which I feel has been prompted by her love of my children. She has no private income or ability to earn money.

UNHAPPY

I don't wonder that you hesitate over accepting this lady's generous offer, considering the tragic ending of your first marriage. If you marry this woman and have more children, you would only be adding complications as to how you would fit outgo into income. I'm sorry you didn't tell me what the sources of your salary are, as I might make some suggestions for getting a better pay envelope.

If you are a mechanic, the government is paying good prices today for that type of work. Or you might study up in public libraries or not schools to acquire greater proficiency in a semi-professional job.

But taking every element into consideration, the affection of this woman for your children, the fact that she may care for you personally and that she would like to be married, and have a home of her own, there is reason to doubt that she would succeed where your wife failed utterly.

I know that families of eight have managed to scrape along on a salary of $20 a week, but it requires financial wizardry to do that thing. If this woman is willing to continue supervision of your children until you can get a little better pay envelope, why not go along with things as they are until that happy day arrives?

Training Rules Problem

Dear Miss Fairfax:
My fiancée and I have decided to ask your advice about a few things. I'm a boxer and have to follow strict regulations. Since I'm finished with amateur boxing, I think I should keep these regulations, preparing for the time when I might go places in the boxing field. When I visit my fiancée and want to go home early, she gets angry, and doesn't understand that I must get plenty of rest to keep fit.

I see her four nights a week, but can't see her before 8:30 which doesn't give us much time together. But why should she become angry when she knows it's for the good of both of us?

We are both 24 years old and have been engaged over a year. What do you advise to help us stop our quarreling?
CHAMPION

While it's highly flattering that your girl wants to keep you longer when you spend an evening with her, at the same time she's unreasonable in expecting you to break training rules. If you can't make her understand this, better take your hat and go home in time to get a good night's rest.

No doubt she'll feel badly if you didn't qualify as a boxer.

Sister Causes Family Worry

Dear Miss Fairfax:
I've been married almost six years. When my sister was 14 years old she came to live with us. We got along fine until she was old enough to go to work. There she met a boy and has gone crazy over him. Every weekend he goes home to another town, and I've been told he has another girl up there.

Whenever I try to give my sister advice she tells me to mind my own business. She says I'm old-fashioned. I'm only 22 and she is 19. They see each other every morning, every night and he stays until he's ready to leave, sometimes early in the morning. They were to have been married last year, but after she had bought her wedding trousseau, he backed out.

Miss Fairfax, I need someone's advice. Our mother has been dead for thirteen years and I don't know what to do. I have thought of asking her to go somewhere else to live, but I hesitate because she's my sister.
WORRIED

I know of no situation more painful than the one you have described—a young girl bolting to goodness only knows what tragic fate. A day or two ago I read in a paper where parents actually had their daughter committed for vagrancy because she insisted on frequenting questionable dance-halls. While one felt that was the wrong course to pursue, one could not help sympathizing with the distracted parents.

The young man in declining to go on with the marriage ceremony, after your sister had bought her trousseau, shows plainly he's not serious. In her present frame of mind, I would not tell the girl to leave her home. Better let her feel that, in spite of everything, you love her and have her interests at heart. The future is plainly up to the girl herself.

Mother Insists on Younger Boy

Dear Miss Fairfax:
I'm a girl of 16 and like a young man of 21 very much. He is honest, clean-minded and neat. We like the same sports, and our ideas about a lot of things are the same. My parents think he is too old for me and want me to go with only one boy, but I want a variety. This boy friend of 21 thinks the same thing.

I can't have fun with the younger boys. They all want to park and neck all evening. I don't like to do that, and neither does this older friend. If I have to go with only one boy, I'd rather choose this boy of 21. Please tell me what to do.
B. A.

If your parents restrict you to only one boy, the young man of 21, who seems to have outgrown the puppy-stage of affection and doesn't insist on continual "necking," would seem to make a better friend than the youngsters you mention.

You might explain this preference to your mother. If you were my daughter I would not restrict you to one boy friend. Remember the old adage, "There's safety in numbers."

Aspires Too High

Dear Miss Fairfax:
There's a girl who lives in the same house with me—a nice old-fashioned boarding house. I fell for her before I realized it. She always looked so neat, capable, intelligent and tailor-made. I discovered she is a lawyer with a good firm and that they think well of her ability.

To know her better I asked her to give me some legal advice which I really needed. When I asked for a bill she said she was glad to help me, but I don't seem to make any headway. I rapped on her sitting-room door to pay a call. She opened it a crack and waited for me to state my errand. When I said I'd like to come in she told me she was busy.

I'm afraid I lifted my eyes too high, particularly as I hear she is engaged to a man in another city. Since doing that little legal favor for me, she is pleasant but distant.

JUST BILL

Your case doesn't look very hopeful to me, and you will not be furthering this girl's interest in you if you attempt to call on her uninvited and force upon her even the little attentions which you are not welcome.

You've been told she's engaged. Under the circumstances don't you think it would be wiser for you to seek a new boarding house rather than make yourself unhappy by seeing this young lady daily?

Poor Matrimonial Risk

Dear Miss Fairfax:
I'm 23, a high school graduate, in a small business of my own, and have the family car mostly to myself. Whenever I get a boy friend he happens to be with-out his own car, so we generally use mine. Do you think I'm too forward?

I've been going with a boy now for seven months, but we don't seem to get along. We are always arguing. I don't seem able to keep him interested. He drinks heavily, spends all his money and forgets his promises, acts like a fool and afterwards wants to come back.

He says he drinks because he hasn't a home. I encourage him to stay sober, work and save so that we can settle down as I don't have a home either. I board with an aunt. I care enough for him to get married, but am not sure about him. He's the happy-go-lucky type, although I know there's no other girl.

Do you suppose he'll reform if he settles down? I'll depend on you to decide. He's 24 years old.
A. J.

When you see a young man's faults as clearly as you've stated them in your letter to me, how can you consider marrying him? He drinks, wastes his money, you quarrel, and he tells you he does these things because he has no home. Don't you realize that people without backbone, weak and characterless, would bring these faults into any home?

You must be well and affectionately cared for or the family would not give you their car to the extent they do. At 23, you're too young to spoil your life with this kind of a marriage. Try and make something of yourself and doubtless the fates will have a more promising suitor in store for you.

Wants Shower for Sister

Dear Miss Fairfax:
My sister, who is older than I am by eighteen months, is going to be married in the early summer, perhaps May or June. I want to give her a shower, as she has so many girl friends and I think it would be a nice way of getting furnishings for her. Please tell me how to give a shower for my sister. Should the invitations be printed or hand-written?
DOLLY

If you observe the conventions set down by the rules of correct social usage, you must not give your sister a shower at all. Don't you see it's like angling for gifts for a member of your own family? Showers are given by close friends or distant relatives.

Invitations are never printed for any occasion, if you desire to be conversant with good form. Whoever gives your sister the shower could either telephone or send hand-written notes.

You might suggest this shower party to one of your sister's close friends. If you will send me a self-addressed, three-cent stamped envelope, I will be glad to forward you my leaflets on showers, which tells you how to present the gifts.

Don't Be Too Serious

Dear Miss Fairfax:
I'm a junior in high school and have been keeping company with a young man eight years older. He comes to our house a great deal and is a friend of the family, but they don't know of our friendship.

A few weeks ago he went on a vacation and while away he saw a good deal of another girl whom he has known since college. Since he has returned, he seldom comes over and treats me as if I were some little girl.

I've been out a couple of times with his younger brother, and like him too. Do you think I'm too young to be going with this older man, and should I go with his brother and other younger boys instead?
B. M.

Let's be thankful for the younger brother. A junior in high school strikes me as too young to be seriously interested in anyone. When the glamour of the college girl begins to wear a little thin, perhaps the older brother will come back; then you'll have two strings to your bow. My advice is not to be too serious about any boys while you're in high school. Friendships are fine, love affairs are devastating to good grades.

Prescription for Good Nature---a Barbecued Steak

By ALLAN STEWART
AP Feature Service

San Francisco — In California, where many a strange cult has been spawned, there is another strange society—but one you can get your teeth into.

It is the Buckaroo Barbecue Society, organized in 1938 by M. H. Auerbach of San Francisco, a traveling salesman, as a medium for trading cooking recipes and building bigger and fancier barbecue pits. Today the Buckaroo Barbecue Society has 11 chapters all over the United States, and more are being added. Auerbach is national president.

The society has no dues and is non-commercial. To encourage informality, each member has a nickname. Auerbach is "Old Smoky." Purpose of the society, Auerbach says, is to encourage people to get outdoors and barbecue. If you bite into a piece of good, aromatic, sizzling barbecued meat, you haven't got the time or inclination to be mad at anybody.

Hints for Beginners
The California style of barbecue is most popular among the newer addicts and involves the use of anything from crude home-made pits in the back-yard to fancy wrought-iron jobs on large estates. Cooking is done over charcoal embers, and is limited not only to beef but to venison, veal, pork, poultry and fish.

Beginners, says Auerbach, sometimes ruin the meat because the coals are not in the proper state for cooking.

For cooking beef, he suggests, the charcoal or charcoal briquets should burn for an hour, or until cherry red. If the coals flame, douse them with a little water.

Beef, may be eaten rare, medium or well-done, lamb should be nearly well-done, but — Auerbach emphasizes — poultry venison bear fish, veal and pork must be well-done. For well-done courses the coals should burn for about two hours, or until white. The meat should be turned frequently.

The old-time California barbecue was not complete without Mexican pink beans (frijoles), toasted French bread reeking of garlic, and salsa, a concoction of chopped-up green chili, tomato and onion.

It's A National Custom

A barbecue pit which will handle a group of eight can be built for about five dollars, says Auerbach. A pit four feet long, three feet wide and two and a half feet deep is made of concrete, brick, or rock. Holes should be cut in the base for draft, and a grid with bars one and a half inches apart fitted over the top.

New Englanders still call their shindies "throwing a beefsteak," Auerbach says. Usually they are held indoors, with a caterer doing the cooking. Auerbach looks sourly on this sort of stuff.

In the Southeast and South the "pit" type of barbecue is favored. A trench six to eight feet deep has a rock of brick bottom. The fire is built on an iron plate placed about two feet from the bottom. After six or eight hours embers from huge pieces of hardwood are raked back and the plate lifted. The meat, well-seasoned, wrapped in butcher paper or leaves, then swathed in yards of wet burlap, is placed in the pit bottom, the plate replaced, and the coals spread out.

When the meat is taken out the next day, with all its flavor retained due to the paper or leaves, the eating is something terrific.

Another Southwest practice is to nearly fill a deep pit with mesquite. When a deep bed of coals results, quarters of beef are placed on spits. The meat is turned frequently and swabbed with melted suet.

In Oregon and Washington fish barbecues, using charcoal embers take precedence. Old-fashioned hinged bread-toasters prevent fish from falling apart during the frequent turnings.

While not recommended for beginners, the Indian style of coating fish or fowl with mud and tossing them into a fire brings surprising results. The fowl should be cleaned and picked, or the fish scaled, then wrapped in laurel or other suitable leaves before plastering. When the baked mud and leaves are peeled off, there is the tender meat with all its flavor retained.

Auerbach warns that barbecue column when young people have asked me what amount is necessary on which to begin housekeeping, it depends on the couple.

If a girl has been brought up to be thrifty and to consider waste a crime, $25 a week would be ample. Then there's the other kind. Some girls feel that life would be a mockery unless their young men take them to swell restaurants for meals and drinks, and then dance afterwards until all hours of the morning, fortifying themselves with more drinks meantime. To them, $25 a week would be inadequate.

If Ellen doesn't know much about housekeeping it would be well for her to enroll in a domestic science class without loss of time. As you want her to resign her job anyhow, it might be well for her to join one of these classes immediately. She should go into the matter thoroughly. The Government pamphlets which I mention in my budget will help her out.

Your fiancée also should learn how to keep accounts and budget her time as well as the family finances. Old houses which have been turned into flats are apt to be less expensive and more roomy than new buildings which boast the latest gadgets in the way of modern improvements.

Shouldn't Be Extravagant

Don't beggar yourself in the beginning, buying expensive furniture. Unpainted furniture now comes in excellent shapes—reproductions of early American models. In the best possible taste. And it's lots of fun to paint these so that your rooms will be harmonious as to color. I know all about this from experience, as I've done a good deal of furniture painting myself. If you have any gifts along the line of cabinet and carpentry work, you can make very attractive pieces of furniture at home.

If you and your girl are blessed with the divine gift of common sense, and are really in love, your marriage will be a grand success. Think what fun it will be, remembering all these amusing little makeshifts when you finally land on Easy Street!

If you will send me a self-addressed, three-cent stamped envelope, I will be very glad to forward you a copy of my budget which has helped many newlyweds not only to live comfortably on $25 a week but to put aside a fair-sized nest-egg.

Second Team Nips All-City Five 35-33

Close Benefit Game Decided By Late Goal

Paul Whitford Drops in Winning Bucket in Last Minute of Play

Score Tied Eleven Times During Game; James Stars for Losers

The old saying "the first shall be last and the last shall be first," ran true to form last night at the S. S. Peter & Paul School gym when Cumberland's cagers selected for honorable mention by the three local coaches following the end of the basketball season, turned back the first choice quint by a 35-33 score.

The contest, an idea of the players themselves, was staged as a benefit affair, the proceeds going to the city's 1941 Community Chest. A crowd estimated at little more than 300 saw the game, which was nip-and-tuck all the way.

Paul Whitford, Fort Hill High's little powerhouse who wasn't even considered when nominations for the all-city five were passed out, was the hero of the battle. The diminutive basket swisher plunked in the winning field goal in the last minute of play, breaking a 33-33 deadlock, and shared high-scoring honors for the winners with Billy Dean, a teammate of this year's Sentinel team, and Bill "Lenny" Smith of LaSalle. Each accounted for eight points.

Score Tied 11 Times
The score was tied eleven times during the hectic struggle and the teams were never separated by more than four points. The count was knotted three times in the first quarter, and four times in the fourth quarter.

Bill "Jesse" James was the star for the All-City combination and the top scorer of the game with fourteen tallies. The flashy forward, who was one of the mainstays of this year's championship Allegany outfit, flipped five double-dunkers and added four points at the free-throw line. Johnny Small of LaSalle gained runnerup honors with eight counters.

The winning combination was fittingly handled by Bill Bowers whose fine piece of work at the Campbell school the past campaign, stamped him as the "coach of the year." Bobby Cavanaugh coached the All-City hoopers.

Sherman Scores First

Sherman started the game by cutting the strings with a beautiful one-hand goal from the right corner of the court but Smith of the winners came right back with a long felder to tie the figures at 2-all. James broke the deadlock with a set heave to give the "Dream" team the lead which it maintained until three minutes before the quarter ended when Dean's two-pointer tied the score at 6-6.

Smith's one-hander and Donald McIntyre's set pitch gave the second-choice team a four-point lead with but a minute and a half remaining at 10-all when the period ended.

The All-Cities stepped to the front on three points by James and two by Small, following John Blades' twin-pointer for the winners, to make the score 15-12 after three minutes of second-quarter play. Dean then came through with three straight tallies to tie the count at 15-all. Dean dropped in a foul. Whitford followed with a field goal. Penny Shaffer tallied for the All-Cities and Whitford banged in another felder to bring the score to 20-17 in favor of the second team at the half.

James Third-Quarter Star

The score was tied at 21-21 and 23-23 in the third quarter, which was featured by work of James who scored three field goals. Sherman's felder broke the last deadlock and Shaffer's long dual-pointer gave the first team a four point advantage at 27-23 as third-quarter hostilities were brought to a close.

The All-Cities didn't drop behind in the final period until the last 1:30 of the quarter, although the score was tied three times at 27-29, and 31, before that McIntyre's bucket put the second teamers ahead at 33-31 and Sherman's pair of one-point goals with less than a minute to go tied the score at 33-all, thus setting the stage for Whitford's game-winning basket.

In the preliminary the Lafayette Club, 130-pound A.A.U. tournament winners, trounced the Sunday School League All-Stars 33 to 21. The summary of the main game:

Nova Is Favored To Whip Baer in Tonight's Fight

Crowd of 17,000 Expected To See Battle in New York

By SID FEDER

NEW YORK, April 3 (AP)—Strictly for the fun of it, without enclosing any box tops or reasonable facsimiles thereof, just try to think of a more remarkable sports figure than Madcap Maxie Baer.

If you come to the conclusion that he is "it," you'll have the answer to why it is a tough problem to pick the winner of tomorrow night's twelve-round in Madison Square Garden between Maxie and Lou Nova, the California collegian.

17,000 To See Fight

You'll also have the answer to why Promoter Mike Jacobs is gleefully expecting some 17,000 fans to show up for the proceedings and contribute to a "pot" of over $70,000, for this fust which is to decide a September opponent for Joe Louis. That is, provided the bomber doesn't suffer a relapse from overwork against Tony Musto, Abe Simon, Billy Conn and probably one or two others in the meantime.

On form, and off their previous get-together two years ago, in which Nova stopped Max with a cut mouth in eleven rounds after Baer had the blonde better so groggy in the sixth he was walking to the wrong corner, you have to like Lou. This corner strings along with that belief, picking Nova to win a decision. However, knowing Lou's stubborn pride in his ability to slug it out with any fighter. This wouldn't be surprised at all if he winds up sound asleep after catching one of Maxie's right hands on the "whiskers."

Is Surprise Package

Max, having come off the fistic ash-hep twice, stands today at thirty-two—the complete surprise package of the ring. He's a 5 to 7 underdog in the betting, but he was a 1-4 the night he made Tony Galento holler "Uncle" by digging shots into Two-Ton's tummy last summer, and he was 5 to 8 when he chased Patrick Edward Comiskey right out of the picture in about two minutes flat a couple of months later.

As for Nova, he, too, has come back a long way. Galento and a blood condition put him in a hospital in September 1939 and there he stayed for a year. Back in action, he cut Comiskey up considerably and won a ten-round decision in January to get the shot at Baer. The main go is slated for 10 p. m. (E. S. T.).

THIS AND THAT IN THE SPORTS WORLD

That was a fine gesture on the part of the basketball players of Cumberland to play what has been termed the "Dream" game for the benefit of the Community Chest. It is not often that All-Star teams which have been selected by coaches ever have the opportunity to meet and the fine attendance at last night's crowds proves the fans liked the idea.

This column would like to suggest that the All-City five and the Second team meet each year in an annual game with the proceeds going to the Community Chest. It will not only be the means of contributing something to a worthy cause but will give the fans an opportunity of seeing just how the All-Star teams stack up and would be a fitting climax to the basketball season each year.

We also think that the coach of the team winning the city championship should be honored with the job of tutoring the All-City team each year, and that the honorable-mention quint's coach be selected by the toss of a coin.

Not only the players, but school authorities, the referees and fans deserve a great big "Thank You."

But you can't tie this one. Richard A. MacAndrews, 60-year-old Dickinson college coach, of Carlisle, Pa., after thirty years of coaching is right where he started on the record books—victories and defeats balance perfectly.

A 50-50 victory over Bucknell university in this year's final game gave Dickinson a record of 179 victories and 179 defeats under MacAndrews' coaching. He has also been coach for twenty years of the thirty year stretch.

Dickinson's 1941 basketball record of ten victories and six defeats was the best since 1931 when the Red Devils lost only to Yale and to Franklin and Marshall in a seven-game schedule.

Horsemen reaching Bowie from winter quarters at Columbia, S. C., are "high" on Trainer Max Hirsch's string, which will go to New York. (Continued on Page 14, Col. 2)

Johnny Vander Meer Goes Route As Reds Down Boston Red Sox 5 to 1

MONTGOMERY, Ala., April 3 (AP)—It fell to Johnny Vander Meer to be the first Cincinnati Red pitcher to hurl the full nine innings in spring training, and the southpaw did himself proud today as the Reds beat the Boston Red Sox, 5 to 1.

Johnny, who hasn't been right since pitching two successive no-hit games in 1938, held the Boston sluggers to six hits.

Ernie Lombardi's game ankle stood up for the entire game and he collected a pair of singles.

Cards Win Easily

COLUMBUS, Ga., April 3 (AP)—Stan Musial and Clarence Beers of the Columbus, Ga., club of the Sally League held the St. Louis Cardinals hitless for six straight innings today but the Major Leaguers won, 14 to 6.

S. Louis got six runs in the first, three in the second and five in the ninth, largely through the wildness of the Columbus pitchers.

A's Trim Cubs Again

YUMA, Ariz., April 3 (AP)—Connie Mack's Philadelphia A's walloped the Chicago Cubs, 5 to 4, today for their fifth straight victory over Manager Jimmy Wilson's club. Lou Novikoff, the mad Russian, connected for a homer in the sixth inning with one on to put the Cubs ahead 4-3, but the Athletics came to nick Claude Passeau for a pair of runs in the seventh.

Browns Trim Bees

TEXARKANA, Ark., April 3 (AP)—Eldon Auker, the St. Louis Browns' submarine baller, pitched one of the best games of his career today, and also hit a homer but he had to be rescued in the ninth inning to provide the American Leaguers with a 7-5 victory over the Boston Bees.

Auker faced only twenty-five batters over the first eight innings, giving only two hits, of which one was a homer by "Bama" Bowell.

In the ninth, however, he lost his touch, filled the bases on passes and then tossed a grand-slam home run ball to Maxie West with two out. He passed Gene Moore after that and then was yanked in favor of

Graham Picks Reds - Yanks To Win Flags

Roving Reporter Says Cincinnati Has the Pitching

Thinks Rejuvenation of Yankees Will Bring Them the Pennant

By DILLON GRAHAM

Sports Editor, AP Feature Service
NEW YORK—Mr. Whiskers has provided spring baseball prognosticators with another alibi.
Sprains, fractures and salary whip-aches—hindrances to pennant contenders which sports writers can't foresee—have always served as good outs for scribes whose flag choices wound up in Kalamazoo. Now the Star Spangled Banner guy has come up with the draft and this new style numbers game may afford an additional excuse for errant predictors.

Even the Gallup poll interrogators and the brush salesmen, who between them seem to get around everywhere, have never accounted a sports correspondent who could pass up an opportunity to predict anything. And so, admitting the absurdity of calling the September finish in April, this corner counsels you to rush out and bet a well-worn dime on the Yankees and the Reds.

How They Will Finish
Furthermore, to make a loud splash out of this dive into the future, we give you the final result—place of the other clubs, to wit:

| AMERICAN | NATIONAL |
|-----------|-----------|
| Yankees | Reds |
| Indians | Dodgers |
| Tigers | Cardinals |
| Red Sox | Giants |
| White Sox | Cubs |
| Browns | Pirates |
| Senators | Bees |
| Athletics | Phillies |

This estimate, which we, unfortunately, won't guarantee, comes after a month of hopping around the palm and palmetto belt in Florida and Cuba.

Looking down our sunburned schnozzles we see in the distance another "break up the Yankees" campaign. The Yanks collapsed last year and yet the Tigers and Indians barely outstumbled them. A revised infield, with a pair of fancy fielding rookies around the middle and a spry Rolfe at third; a bolstered flanking corps and a peppy Dickey behind the bat make the Yanks look like the formidable ogres of the past.

Indians Are Stronger
The Indians also ran last year when they should have run far ahead of the field. The Yankee policy is to never give an Indian a second chance, so the Tribe likely will have to reserve a second-place parking place for its wigwag (and fight off a Tiger raid to hold that).

Cleveland should be stronger. Gee Walker adds punch to the outfield. The bats of Hal Trosky and Ken Keltner should speak louder. Jim Bagby, Clint Brown and Joe Heving afford more pitching reserves. And Roger Peckinpaugh may be able to make one happy family out of the Savages.

Detroit surprised last year and the Tigers may roar again. Del Baker has a better club. Gehring can bend over for a grounder without groaning. McNair will give Bartlett some relief. The Greenberg-York-Gehring-McCosky punch is as potent as ever. Newsom should brag-and-win again. Rowe may falter but young tossers make up the slack.

This roving reporter likes the Red Sox to sneak in ahead of the White Sox and Browns in a blistering battle for the other first flight berth. Boston has power but uncertain pitching. The White Sox are better than they look and the Browns may be the most improved club in the circuit. Washington and Philadelphia are still in the league.

Sees Three-Cornered Race
The only sure National league prediction is that the Phillies will successfully defend their cellar rights. The Boston Bees ran like a well-oiled machine late last season and their upsurge may disturb the also upclimbing Chicago Cubs, New York Giants and Pittsburgh Pirates.

There'll be a three-cornered alley fight for the flag, with the Reds outlasting the Dodgers and Cardinals. Pitching should prove the difference and the Reds have the pitching. Given anywhere near the same brand of flinging and either of the other clubs might win. The Dodgers in addition to hopeful hymns about their hurling, are also sampling on good news for Ducky Medwick, Big Poison, Wanner and rookie Hal Reiser. The Cards still are trying to put their infield puzzle together, and they're trusting rookies in the outfield, behind the bat and on the mound.

Boy, break that crystal ball. We're through with it.

BIG BILL LEE---HE'S HOLDOUT

Big Bill Lee

Big Bill Lee, Chicago Cubs' star pitcher of 1938 and 1939, is still a holdout, unusual for him. Lee, who had a bad season last year and was asked to take a heavy salary slash, has expressed the hope he will be traded. Lee has been offered $12,000, it is reported. He is believed to have received $20,000 when he was the Cubs star.

Maryland Nine Defeats Vermont

COLLEGE PARK, Md., April 3.—Combining a thirteen-hit attack with Art Woodward's classy three-hit pitching, the University of Maryland baseball team shut out Vermont 11 to 0 today to win its first game in four starts.

Woodward took over the mound duties in the second inning after Jim Mead and Max Hunt had experienced trouble in stopping the Vermonters. From there on in, Woodward throttled the visitors, fanning six of them.

Curly Radebaugh, with two singles and a double in four trips to the plate, led Maryland's thirteen-hit attack off Ackley and Albergrin.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK, April 3.—(The Special News Service)—Some day, says Fred Corcoran, the baseball clubs are going to be taking golf pros to the spring training camps as casually as trainers, rookies and vitamin pills are now taken.

This might seem akin to taking a bean shooter on a lion hunting expedition, and under several pounds of pressure Corcoran will admit the wish is father of the thought, as he is tournament manager of the P. G. A. and the wedding of baseball and golf would mean a couple of months of extra work for sixteen pros.

However, he backs up his statement with arguments, and a glimpse of a ball team's luggage indicates this idea of mixing old and water isn't so far fetched, at that.

"Ball players have discovered that the best way to keep in condition is to play golf," Corcoran argues. "Just notice the real veterans still playing ball—Fox, Hubbell, Grove, Paul Waner and the others. They're all golfers."

"You walk about six miles during a round of golf. That's great for the legs. Babe Ruth started playing about 1918, used to sneak out morning to get in his round before games. In those days ball clubs frowned on golf, although the Cubs considered taking a pro to game as far back as 1920."

"And you will notice that ball players are pretty fair golfers. Wes Ferrell, Jigger Statz, Dick Bartell, Sam Byrd, Hank Leiber, Paul Deringer, Paul Waner, Merv Shea all flirt with par. Most of the baseball men hit a long ball off the tee."

"What I'm getting at is that there is a lot in common between hitting a baseball and hitting a golf ball. I know golf is an unnatural game, that the form is contrary to instinct."

"But the elements of timing and wrist action are the same. Sam Byrd, who has become a fine tournament golfer since quitting baseball, says one game helps the other and as for the conditioning part of it, Ty Cobb, who had a 72 the other day and whose handicap is down to five, says golf is the greatest leg conditioner there is."

Joe Cronin played thirty-six holes a day during the off season whenever he got the chance, and says he wishes he had taken up the game fifteen years ago. Paul Deringer thinks golf will add five years to his baseball career."

There is no argument against golf as a conditioner for any game in which durable legs play an important part. The only argument that might be advanced against it concerning its relation to baseball is that a baseball player would be lost using a golf swing at the plate, and some fuzzy-minded fellow might forget where he was.

And there is one other slight difficulty involved. A golf pro was demonstrating wrist action to Bud Lewis in a hotel lobby down South this spring.

"That's fine," Lewis remarked. "There's just one little thing wrong. You know that baseball won't stay still long enough for me to hit it."

(Released by North American Newspaper Alliance)

The Stretch Runner

AUGUSTA, Ga.—They'll tell you around here that when it comes to stretch running Byron Nelson is the one to watch.

Due to faulty wrist action at times Nelson can stumble into his off days, but when he gets hot there are few hotter, and when he has a chance to win there are few who can clamp down with a firmer grip.

In the last month I've seen the red-headed Texan finish with an eagle and a birdie in tournaments where there was important cash at stake, each time slashing magnificent long iron shots to within a few feet of the cup.

Once in a while Nelson has a tendency to lock his left wrist and lose part of his backswing action. But when he gets away from this kink his long irons are deadly, especially under pressure when his concentration on the main job is remarkable.

In this respect Nelson reminds you of Gene Sarazen in his young days, although Sarazen is no soft pumpkin now when he gets a whiff of the stretch with a chance to finish in the money.

"I took more of a mental or nerve beating than many realize in my tournament days," Bobby Jones tells you. "Winning golf isn't so much a matter of good club swinging, although, of course, that is important. But there are so many good club swingers—many more than those who have the ability to keep concentrating on every shot."

"In winning golf you can't take any mental recesses. You can't have any lapses. Just one may be enough to wreck a round. You can't take anything for granted."

"This is one of the main troubles I have in these Masters' tournaments," Bob says. "I can get around here under seven in practice. I make up my mind to play the same type of golf when the tournament starts. But with big crowds on hand and the keener desire to play better golf, this is something you can't bring about."

For example I find my attention distracted by minor things that once I would never have noticed. Relaxation must be a natural thing. You can't force it.

"It isn't so hard to concentrate for three or four holes in a row, but to keep this up for eighteen holes is another job."

One of the great holes on this Augusta course is the 13th. The hole is 490 yards in length. The tee shot is guarded by a brook that wanders off to the left and then winds along until it crosses just in front of the green.

Two fine shots will get you home. But they call for a good drive and then for a long iron or a full wood where any mistake can mean a 6 or a 7.

Sarazen, usually a big chance taker, rarely accepts the gamble here. Gene plays short on his second and then gambles on the short put and putt for his crack at a birdie.

It is the type of hole that favors such hitters as Thomson, Sneed, Hogan and Wood.

The Augusta National puts a heavy premium on chipping and putting. There are sharp upward slopes that belong to most of the greens. And most of the greens are big, rolling, slanting and often decked out with mounds.

They are greens that suit such short-game stars as Horton Smith, Paul Runyan, Johnny Revolta. So far as texture is concerned, you get no finer greens anywhere in any land.

There are four par 3 holes here, ranging in length from 490 to 510 yards. I've seen Jimmy Thomson at different times reach all four with a drive and a mashie. He is still the Siege Gun of golf, and don't let anyone tout you off.

Sneed, Hogan and Wood are all extremely long, but Thomson is still the Big Cannon—with a range from 280 to 300 yards, or longer with a favoring wind.

Sneed gets a longer roll than anyone else. Sammy comes into the ball with a flatter trajectory. He clubbed almost sweeps the ground on its way through the ball, with a decidedly smaller arc. This gives him an overspin that forces the ball to travel a long way after it lands.

Because of the presence of Bobby Jones—plus the fact that this is the last big tournament of the spring campaign—the Masters' like an amazing appeal to all who play in it. This is one tournament that all want to win beyond almost any other, barring only the National Open.

And every entry in the field is pulling for Bobby to swing back in his old-time pace. Which only adds additional pressure for the erstwhile wizard.

OPTIMISTIC SAILOR

Getting engaged to Lucille Ball is easier for sailor-boy George Murphy than buying her a ring—and thereby hangs a tale of screwball comedy and racy romance in "A Girl, a Guy and a Gob," starting tomorrow at the Liberty theater. Edmond O'Brien as the "Guy" is featured with George Murphy and Lucille Ball.

IN A TIGHT SPOT

Tom Conway finds himself in a tight spot when accosted by Chris-Pin Martin and Wallace Beery in a menacing sequence of "The Bad Man," outdoor adventure drama now showing on the Maryland screen. Lionel Barrymore, Laraine Day and Ronald Reagan are others in the cast.

THE LAST ROUND-UP!

A terrific battle with the redskins has just taken place, in which Richard Dix and Preston Foster have been saved by the U. S. troops. Douglass Dumbrille, captain of the troops, listens to rancher Dix recount the fearless heroism shown by the reckless cowboy, Foster, during the climax of Paramount's newest six-gun film of the West, "The Round Up," which opens Saturday at the Strand theater.

'Girl, Guy and Gob' On Liberty Screen

Marking Harold Lloyd's initial venture into the motion picture production field, "A Girl, a Guy and a Gob," starting tomorrow at the Liberty theater employs modern comedy technique to depict an uproarious romance featuring George Murphy as the gob, Lucille Ball as the girl and Edmond O'Brien as the guy.

The girl is a stenographer and the sanest member of her wacky but wonderful family, consisting of Jawne, her mother; Pokey, her father, and Pigeon, her brother. The girl is engaged to the gob, and if he ever gets together enough money to buy a ring and a license they'll get married. At thinking up ways to make a couple hundred bucks the gob is a genius, but making the ways work is any man's fun.

From 'Okie' to Millionaire Is Henry Fonda's Lot

What comes next? Out in Hollywood, anything's likely to happen—particularly to a versatile actor. Take Henry Fonda for example. Not so long ago, Fonda was a starring "Okie," dust-caked, driven, harried, living from hand-to-mouth. Suddenly, he's got to forget all that and become a millionaire living not in a tumble-down shack but a luxurious mansion with servants.

After finishing his "Okie" role in John Steinbeck's grim and realistic "The Grapes of Wrath," Fonda wondered "What comes next?" With just one role in between, the impoverished, unkempt humorless "Okie" was transformed into an immaculate, romantic and very comical millionaire, in Pearson Sturges' latest written-and-directed Paramount picture, "The Lady Eve." This startling change in Fonda will be on view when the picture shows for the last time today at the Strand theater. This story is laid in the historic ghosttown of Bottleneck, not too far distant from Leadville where Little Johnny Brown and his wife were the principal players in one of the strangest dramas of the gold-fields.

Also showing is Joe E. Brown in "So You Won't Talk."

Wallace Beery is he who got slapped—and was slapped right.

In "The Bad Man," his new starring picture now showing at the Maryland theater, he had to be slapped by Laraine Day. The technique was carefully explained to her, the camera angles worked out. "Don't be afraid to lay it on," said Beery. "You couldn't slap hard enough to hurt me."

The cameras started. Laraine swung with all the strength of her athletic body. The slap popped so loudly that it almost broke the

I can't afford to stop work

—if this fits your case, then, here is an easy way to protect your strength...to generate new power...you may be able to overcome that tired, run-down feeling...sluggish digestion...loss of weight...poor appetite

THOUSANDS and thousands of men and women have testified to the benefits S.S.S. has brought them. The facts are simple, though a low red blood condition is often most deceptive. Wear and strain of worry, overwork, colds, and sickness often reduce one's blood strength.

Now you may rebuild this strength by restoring your red blood to normal, in the absence of an organic trouble or focal infection, with the famous S.S.S. Tonic.

S.S.S. acts two ways

In S.S.S. Tonic you go after the trouble in two ways...first you increase the appetite and better your stomach digestion—thus making better use of the food you eat—secondly, thin, weak, watery blood is made rich and red again, thus giving you a boost in energy.

If you can't afford to stop work...if there are loved ones dependent on you for support...you owe it to them and to yourself to start now on a course of S.S.S. Tonic.

enjoy better health

S.S.S. may be just what you need to get you on the right road to health and happiness again...it helps build sturdy health...that's why so many say it "makes you feel like yourself again."

Joseph G. Jackson Urged by Friends To Be Candidate

Cumberland Man Will Seek Nomination for Sixth District Post

A "dark horse" in the person of Joseph Goodie Jackson, 48, of 310 Shriver avenue, last night stepped into the picture as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for the House of Representatives from the Sixth Maryland District.

Mr. Jackson announced that he will throw his hat into the ring and make a bid for the post left vacant by the death of Rep. William D. Byron, who was killed when an airplane crashed in Georgia.

Friends Prompt Decision

Persistent urging by his friends to get into the political fight prompted Jackson to make a definite announcement.

Jackson, a native of Jane Lew, W. Va., and an alumnus of Washington and Lee University, Lexington, Va., is district representative of the Corn Products Sales Company. He has charge of the district comprising Washington, Garrett and Allegany counties in Maryland and twenty-three counties in West Virginia and the Shenandoah valley of Virginia.

A resident of Cumberland for the past fifteen years, Jackson is a warm personal friend of Governor O'Connor, of Maryland; Governor Matthew M. Neely, of West Virginia; Rep. Jennings Randolph, of the second congressional district of West Virginia, and played a leading part in the election campaign of 1916 when John J. Crowell, of Romney, was elected governor of West Virginia.

Feels Highly Honored

When contacted at his home last evening, Jackson admitted that his friends in Washington, Garrett and Allegany counties have approached him in regard to seeking the nomination and that he "naturally felt highly honored in being considered for the post." He stated that he will gladly accept the nomination if it's offered to him by the Democratic State Central Committee.

The newcomer in district politics is a World War veteran, having enlisted in the First West Virginia Infantry March 30, 1917, a week before war was declared. He was with the Third Division Army of Occupation in Andernach, Germany, and was a second lieutenant when honorably discharged after returning to the United States in 1919.

Made Favorable Impression

In recent talks before the Exchange Club, of Cumberland, and the Lions Club, of Hagerstown, Jackson made a favorable impression as an orator on the subject of "Our America." He spoke at the national anniversary and ladies night program of the local Exchange Club Monday night in the Central Y. M. C. A.

Jackson with his wife and daughter live on Shriver avenue. The latter, a graduate of Allegheny high school, is now attending Western Maryland college, Westminster, Md.

CCC Quota Is Fixed At 14 for April 10

Applications Now Being Received by County Welfare Board

Applications from enrollees for the April 10 quota of the Civilian Conservation Corps are now being received at the Allegany County Welfare Board, 37 Washington street, Miss Elsie Heipp, executive secretary announced yesterday.

The next quota is fourteen white youths but Miss Heipp expressed hope that the number will be increased to twenty-one by next Thursday.

To be eligible to enroll in the CCC a young man must be a citizen of the United States, unemployed, of good character, between 17 and 23½ years of age, unmarried, out of school and physically and mentally fit, and able to do vigorous work.

Regular enrollees are paid $30 a month in cash. Enrollees who dependents must agree to allot $15 of this $30 to their dependents at home and $7 a month goes toward a savings account. The $8 which is paid to each enrollee in cash at camp is enough to pay for his personal expenses including some amusements. The $7 a month which is put in a savings account for each enrollee will be paid to him in a lump sum at the time he leaves the CCC.

If the youth is promoted by hard work, to be an assistant leader, he receives $36 a month; if he becomes a leader he receives $45 a month.

The total value of the food, clothing, medical care, etc., and the $30 cash wages paid to each CCC enrollee is estimated at $65.25 a month.

Local Youth Turned Down, Too Tall for the Army

Louis C. Zapf, of 807 Shriver avenue, holds the distinction of being the tallest draft registrant in the state, according to Commander C. H. Bryant, assistant director of the selective service, but the youth is too tall to be drafted.

Zapf stands six feet, nine and one-half inches and tips the beam at 300 pounds. The maximum height allowed in the army is six feet, six inches.

The North End youth was a registrant under local board No. 2.

Mercury Soars to 68 For Warmest Day Here Since November 22

Soaring to the sixty-eight degree mark yesterday afternoon, the temperature reached the highest point attained in Cumberland this year.

The previous high of 1941 was on March 23 when the mercury reached fifty-three degrees.

February's maximum temperature was fifty-three degrees on the eleventh day of the month while in January the high point reached by the mercury was fifty-two degrees on the twenty-second.

Yesterday's sixty-eight was the top figure here since November 22 when the thermometer atop city hall registered the same maximum.

The high for December was sixty-two degrees on the tenth day of the month.

Alumni Orchestra Receives Ovation After Concert

Fort Hill and Allegany Groups Assist in Final Musical Program

Compared to a half dozen towns one can think of at the moment, a Cumberland audience, generally speaking, is not what one would term wildly demonstrative when it comes to dishing out applause at the conclusion of an entertainment.

A Cumberland audience is always extremely mannerly and always sincere in its applause but as a rule it never goes beyond a certain limit, as if the people were saying to themselves "this was very nice but there's no point in overdoing the thing."

Strike Happy Medium

Of course this is not to imply that a Cumberland audience is as Scotch in such things as they are in Boston, a town where they clap with their fingertips and where the man in the next seat starts critiquing the percussion section before the conductor has had a chance to miss up his hair.

"Pretty ragged, that," a Boston man will remark coolly while a violinist plays a selection in a manner that would make the composer weep with pleasure. People like that, of course, are just the limit. However, to go to the other extreme, some audiences practically go crazy after an unusually brilliant performance. One recalls an evening that Lucretia Bori was given twenty-six curtain calls in the Cleveland auditorium and even then the audience didn't want to go home.

To get back to the typical Cumberland audience, it would probably be correct to say that it strikes a happy medium. It is neither cold nor hot but discreetly appreciative in its mid way.

Orchestra Receives Ovation

However, an audience at the Fort Hill auditorium last night really took its hands out of its pockets and gave Milton A. Holtz and his orchestra a thundering good ovation at the conclusion of the final group of the evening which featured the alumni group assisted by the Fort Hill and Allegany orchestras. And they certainly deserved it.

The alumni orchestra started out three years ago and it has been working and building ever since. When members of the three groups merged last night for the final selections people in the audience sat up, looked around, and suddenly came to the conclusion that they were listening to what one day is going to be an outstanding symphony orchestra.

There was both majesty and depth of tone in the two Mozart selections and Beethoven's finale from the Fifth Symphony as played last night under the direction of Holtz. The orchestra was well balanced and showed it could respond to direction.

The horns were especially outstanding, playing with great purity of tone and coming out clear and sharp to give the general effect point and balance.

Strings Show Promise

The strings played with considerable assurance in this last group although in general they were not quite so uniform as the horns. They on his way to his home south of the subway after a trip to the business section of town. As he was about to enter the subway at 2:30 a. m. he slipped on "ice, water or some object lying on the sidewalk" the suit states.

As a result, Reckley was thrown over and between the guard rails and fell below the level of the sidewalk, the petition asserts. As a result of the fall, Reckley received painful and permanent injuries about the head, body and limbs that necessitated his being confined to the hospital for some time, the petition alleges.

Reckley contends that "at the time of the accident, all lights near and in the subway were out and had been out all night."

The light and equipment were old and in poor condition the suit charges. The claimant further charges that the defendant firm has on previous occasions been notified that the lights were out due to defective and old equipment.

Ratchford, Hackett and See Appear in Series of Lectures

A thirty-minute motion picture which shows the blind actually at work in the Mary and Workshop for the Blind, in Baltimore, was presented last night at the Davis Memorial church, Oldtown road, and will be presented this evening at 7:30 o'clock in the Methodist church at Oldtown.

The first showing of the picture was given Wednesday evening at the Grace Community hall, Virginia avenue.

Illustrated lectures by W. S. Ratchford, superintendent of the Maryland Workshop for the Blind, Lemont Hackett, of Baltimore, and Charles M. See, blind member of the Maryland House of Delegates from Allegany county, both of whom are field workers, feature the showing of the picture. The idea of the picture is to acquaint the public with just what the blind can do and how they do it.

Trade Work Began in 1858

Industrial trade work for the blind in Maryland began in 1858 when a trade department was set up for the older students of the Maryland School for the Blind, according to Ratchford. Here the boys began making brooms, while the girls engaged in sewing, knitting and bead work. In 1871 a need was felt for the establishment of a workshop and salesroom for the adult blind, separate from the school.

Three years later, a house was rented at 86 North Howard street, Baltimore, and the following year the shop was moved to 130 North Howard street, where the adult blind engaged in mattress renovating, broom making, basketry, etc. This shop was maintained for four years, and was then discontinued, due to lack of funds. No definite plans for the adult blind were carried on to any great extent until 1906 when a commission of five was appointed by the governor to investigate the situation and $1500 was appropriated for this purpose.

In 1908, the General Assembly passed a law which established the Maryland Workshop for the Blind, a non-profit making agency. Men and women, white and colored, 18 years of age and over, constitute the blind clientele. The number of workers at the beginning was fourteen, besides the manager, with the appropriation from the state of $5,000.

Enrollment Is Now 103

The present enrollment of blind clients is 103, due to the greatly increased industries for the blind. The Maryland Workshop for the Blind is the distributing agency for the United States Government Talking Book Machines for the blind in Maryland. It is also the designated licensing agency for the establishment and maintenance of vending stands for the blind in federal, state, county and municipal buildings, and there are now seventeen blind individuals operating confection and newspaper stands in strategic locations in the state.

Six Permits Issued By City Engineer

Six permits, including four for poster panels, were issued yesterday by the city engineer.

The General Outdoor Advertising Company obtained the permits to erect single panels at North Mechanic street, 150 feet east of Willis creek and on the West Side of Thomas street and two panels on the south side of Williams street east of Park street. Estimated cost is $200.

Joseph P. Nies received a permit for the construction of a one-room frame addition and porch to the first story of his house at 1 South Terrace, at a cost of $200 and Walter P. Miller, was granted a permit to erect a one-story concrete block garage on the rear lot of 446 Central avenue at an estimated cost of $150.

One Birth Is Reported

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Weaver, 23 Grant avenue, announce the birth of a son last night at Memorial hospital.

Registered in Baltimore

Arnold stated when he registered in Baltimore, according to Loughrie, that he could be reached in care of his father, William Arnold, Cumberland. But communications addressed to him here were unclaimed, and an investigation disclosed no trace of such a family living here.

The young man had stated he was born at Kingwood, W. Va., but the Preston county courthouse had no record of his birth. Neither did the registrar of vital statistics at Charleston, Loughrie said.

Reaching a "dead end" in these and other channels, authorities were about to conclude that the youth had given a fictitious name and that efforts to trace him would be a long, perhaps impossible task.

But yesterday, Loughrie received information that Arnold might be found at Swanton. A trip there revealed that an Arnold family had moved two years ago to Kitzmiller. At Kitzmiller, Loughrie was told the family had moved a year ago to Sulphur, W. Va.

Finally at Sulphur, the registrant's mother was found. The last she had heard, her son was working at a sawmill at Barnum, W. Va. A trip to Barnum brought the information that Arnold had moved to Oldtown.

To Oldtown the chase went, and Arnold was found working at a sawmill. He was arrested and brought to the county jail here.

The long chase piled up a total of 152 miles on the speedometer of Loughrie's car.

The marshal quoted Arnold as saying he didn't remember giving the Cumberland address, explaining that he had been drinking at the time. The youth said, according to Loughrie, that all he knew was that his family was living at Swanton the last he had heard from them. He was visiting a sister in Baltimore at the time of the registration, he said.

Arnold was at a loss to explain why he gave the Cumberland address, denying that he had intended to evade the draft by giving a wrong address.

Not New to Christians

"It's nothing new for Christians to be at war," he continued "Christians are always at war with everything that is evil."

"In fact, we are commanded to fight against all that is evil and wrong. And the war that we must fight—that we are fighting—is a war between good and evil."

Dr. Clark said he was not alarmed over the possibility of invasion of America by a foreign foe—which he did not name, although the inference was obvious. It's virtually out of the question for an enemy power successfully to attack us either by land, sea or air.

To land a sufficiently large force to take and hold any appreciable area would require a "vast convoy," he pointed out, which would be an easy target for United States planes, ships and shore batteries.

Improbable as successful invasion is now, it will be absolutely impossible once the defense program is completed, he added.

Says Strategy Is Used

Although there have been suggestions from official quarters that the nation is not impenetrable to attack, Clark asserted that perhaps

Mother Brings Suit against Her Daughter

Action Grows Out of the Disposal of Johnson Devore Estate

The suit of a mother against her daughter growing out of the disposal of an estate was filed yesterday in circuit court by Edward J. Ryan, attorney.

The suit was brought by Mrs. Aurelia Devore, widow of the late Johnson Devore, against her daughter, Mrs. Edna Plummer. Mrs. Plummer is charged with having taken advantage of her father's weakened condition by persuading him to make himself, and not her mother, the beneficiary of a $2,000 life insurance policy.

Mrs. Devore states that she and her husband were married more than forty years ago and that they had several children including the defendant. In the course of their married life Mr. and Mrs. Devore purchased a property at Grahamtown, Devore, a coal miner in the employ of the Consolidation Coal Company, also took out a $2,000 life insurance policy, the petitioner asserts.

Prior to his death in February of this year, the defendant lived with her father for a short time, the suit states. After his death the insurance was paid to the defendant and banked in the Fidelity Savings Bank, Frostburg, the suit continues.

Of late, there has been an indication that the defendant might withdraw this money from the bank, the plaintiff states, and for this reason the court has been asked to issue a restraining order to be effective until a hearing can be held in court.

Associate Judge William A. Huster granted the order which prevents the defendant from withdrawing funds from the Frostburg bank pending the outcome of the case.

Police Are Searching For Missing Student

Police last night were seeking Warren McClure, 14, of 1327 Lafayette avenue, who has been missing since he left home Wednesday morning for Fort Hill high school.

Relatives said he attended school Wednesday but failed to return home.

Young McClure is five feet, two inches tall, weighs ninety-five pounds and has brown hair and blue eyes. He was wearing a red, white and blue knitted cap, dark grey mackinaw coat and long dark trousers when last seen.

Officers reported no developments in their search for Robert L. Jones, 31, of 15 North Chase street, a chef at the Calanese plant, who has been missing since Monday morning.

Wrong Address or Not, Uncle Sam Gets His Man, Draftee Discovers

The long arm of Uncle Sam—and it had to be long—finally reached out yesterday and collared a 23-year-old man accused of giving a false address when he registered for the draft last October 16.

The man was booked at the Allegany county jail as Samuel O. Arnold. Arrested yesterday at Oldtown by Deputy United States Marshal Howard P. Loughrie, he is to be given a hearing this morning before United States Commissioner James Alfred Alvrett.

Registered in Baltimore

Arnold stated when he registered in Baltimore, according to Loughrie, that he could be reached in care of his father, William Arnold, Cumberland. But communications addressed to him here were unclaimed, and an investigation disclosed no trace of such a family living here.
